'LEAVE ME ALONE,' CRIES DOROTHY FROM MADHOUSE

DOROTHY GORDON

Study by Artist Harmony of heiress confined in asylum.

Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller today visited Dorothy Gordon at the McLean Insane Hospital at Waverley. To him the girl, speaking in the manner of an automaton, said she was in the place of her own free will and desired to stay there.

A few days ago a reporter of the American succeeded in getting into Dorothy's cell at the hospital.

To this reporter Dorothy said she was sane and was being kept there by her guardian.

What caused the imprisoned young heiress to change her mind in the interval between these two visits?

Was she schooled, rehearsed, told what to say to the Lieutenant-Governor? Was the grim camisole used to strap her to her bed indicated as punishment for failure to answer the stranger's questions properly?

William F. Jardine, who has been her guardian, went to see her today. What did he tell her?

John Gardiner went to see her yesterday. He is her uncle. What did he tell her? What did John L. Sheehan, Gardiner's attorney, tell her?

To whom can this girl turn with any degree of confidence, as to a friend? Her father is dead. Her mother is dead. Her wealth is a great prize. It will only be hers if she is found sane. Her uncle has told her time and again that the man who was her guardian is not to be trusted. Her erstwhile guardian has warned her that Gardiner was not her friend.

She has no brothers, no sisters. The man she says she loved—the young Tech student, Nowell—has repudiated the romance. She cannot appeal to him.

SHEEHAN QUOTED.

Attorney Sheehan, representing Gardiner, was told of the result of the interview Mr. Fuller had with Dorothy. He said:

"I have no desire to get into any controversy with the Lieutenant-Governor. But when I saw Dorothy yesterday with her uncle, John Gardiner, she said nothing to us like she is reported saying to the Governor. Quite the contrary—but there, I can't say anything now."

INTERVIEW WITH FULLER.

The talk between Alvan T. Fuller and Dorothy Gordon lasted five minutes and astounded Mr. Fuller.

The girl, rationally and without emotion, answered all the questions put to her by the Acting Governor.

Here is the interview that took place:

"Do you know that you can get out of this place if you wish to?" the Acting Governor asked.

"Yes," Dorothy replied.

"Are you a voluntary patient here?"

"Yes."

"Do you want to leave here?"

"No, I wish to stay here."

"Did you sign the paper for your commitment here?"

"Yes, I did."

"Are you treated well and fairly here?"

"Yes. I have no complaint to make."

During the talk Dorothy seemed despondent and uneasy. She spoke automatically, as if she had been asked the same questions many times before. The answers came readily, apparently without thought or consideration.

Mr. Fuller said:

"My opinion is that Dorothy Gordon is not entirely competent. She seems to be in need of further care. She is not an unattractive child, but seemed to be very despondent. Her main thought seems to me to be left alone.

"I did not ask her preference with respect to Mr. Jardine and Mr. Gardiner.

"Before the interview with Dor-

START $50,000,000 MERGER OF PACKERS

Washington, Nov. 15.—Proposed consolidation of the huge packing interests of Armour & Co. and Morris & Co., two of the "Big Five" packers, was presented today for Federal approval under the packers' act and Sherman anti-trust law.

Representatives of both, headed by J. Ogden Armour, conferred with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The consolidation would be effected by purchase of the Morris Company by the Armour interests and involves $50,000,000.

NEW APOSTOLIC DELEGATE TO U. S.

Rome, Nov. 15 (By International News Service).—Secretary Funassoni Pendi, of the Vatican department of propaganda, was selected today to succeed Monsignor Bonzano as apostolic delegate to Washington.

Monsignor Bonzano is to be elevated to the cardinalate at the consistory on December 11.

AIMS TO STOP K.K.K. WEARING OF MASKS

A bill to stop the Ku Klux Klan from wearing masks was filed with the House clerk today by the Law and Order League.

The bill says it shall be unlawful for any person to appear on the streets or in any public place, wearing a mask or any other device "covering his face in such a manner that his identity cannot be known and determined."

A fine of $100 or six months in jail is the penalty.

The league may be asked to amend the bill so that it will not hand a K. O. to Halloween parties and initiations in secret fraternities.

HANGS HIMSELF IN SHIP AT NAVY YARD

Herbert L. Ham, twenty-three years old, a fireman of the U. S. S. Putnam in dry dock at Charlestown today committed suicide by hanging to a stanchion in the engine room.

Ham was a native of North Carolina and was to have left the service in a few days. Shipmates ascribe his act to worry over financial matters. He feared his savings were to be taken from him.

ERROR IN LETTERS CAUSES DEATH

A mistake in two letters caused the death of Jacob Feller, of No. 209 Summer street, Lynn, according to a finding by Medical Examiner Nathaniel P. Gren following an autopsy.

Feller was seized by a Boston Hospital where he was to be X-rayed to take a quantity of barium sulphide, which is a deadly poison.

Feller drank the solution, and in less than forty minutes he was found dead.

ARREST IN SIMBOLI MURDER

East Boston Man Accused of Killing Head of Boston Black Hand

Anthony Bianco of No. 57 Leyden street, East Boston, was arrested today, charged with the murder of Joseph Simboli six weeks ago at a lonely spot in Orient Heights.

The body of Simboli, who was reputed head of the Boston Black Hand organization, was terribly mutilated.

The killing of Simboli, the police say, was undoubtedly an offshoot of the murder of Michael Scarpone, for which six men were tried, including Simboli, who was acquitted. It is believed that Simboli was a marked man from the day he walked out of court a free man.

This was due, the police believe, to the slaying in Brooklyn of Carmello Ferrara, who was to have been a witness in the Scarpone case. It is thought Simboli was behind Ferrara's assassination, and that reprisal was sought.

GASTON GAINS 1,471 VOTES IN RECOUNT

Returns from 159 cities and towns and from 242 of the Boston precincts in the State-wide recount of the Lodge-Gaston Senatorial vote today showed a net gain for Gaston of 1,471 votes over the election night returns, which gave Lodge a plurality of 8,425.

In the recount of the cities and towns outside of Boston, Lodge gained 278 and lost 949, the totals thus far being:

Recount	Press Returns
Gaston 161,811	Gaston 161,309
Lodge 191,974	Lodge 192,283

The gain of 269 votes for Gaston in the Boston recount included the 92 votes gained in yesterday's session in Faneuil Hall, 177 votes which were added through the discovery of a block of 89 votes in precinct 8 of Ward 20, and another of 92 in precinct 11 of Ward 12, which had apparently been overlooked during the first count, and six votes from other wards.

ROMANCE BLASTED BY DAD AND COURT

A stern parent and a stern court ruined the budding romance of Frank Murphy and Lillian Sorgman, youthful sweethearts of Brockton.

A couple of days ago they decided that parents' consent didn't mean much and eloped to Boston. Lillian's father, John Sorgman, trailed and found them at a South End hotel.

The police appeared on the scene and Frank and Lillian appeared in court today. They said they wanted to wed. Lillian's dad said nay. Judge Holzer fined Frank $10 and continued Lillian's case to November 22, advising all parties meantime to reach an agreement. Lillian's dad favors the suit of a Swedish youth rather than that of Murphy for the girl's hand.

Dear Sir:

On last Friday you were publicly quoted as stating that the prices at which this Company was selling coal were unwarranted.

I call upon you to tell the people of this Commonwealth either that you did not make this statement, or that if you made the statement, you had no knowledge of the essential facts in the case. I dislike at this critical time to bring this matter before the public, but an attack upon the honor and good name of my Company leaves me no choice.

STATE ACTS TO OBTAIN TRUTH IN PLIGHT OF GORDON HEIRESS

LIEUT-GOV. FULLER LAUNCHES PROBE TO ASSIST DOROTHY

othy I talked with Dr. Packard and other officials of the institution and the attendants who have had her in charge.

"The woman attendant who has had the girl in charge for the past two months told me that Dorothy had requested to be kept in the institution. She said she had tried several times to commit suicide. I asked if she had ever been restrained, as reported, and I was told that she had. The restraint, I was told, was merely to protect her from what they term her suicidal mania.

"It was a return of her great despondency that occasioned her voluntary return to the institution a year ago last March.

"It seems to me that if the girl is competent to judge for herself, she wishes to stay there. She said so. On the other hand, if she is not competent, she needs further care, and should stay there. Thus she seems doomed to remain.

"Nevertheless, I feel that Dr. Kline should make a full investigation of this case, from all angles of it. I will ask him to do this. I will ask him to ascertain particularly whether Dorothy was induced by some threat or other to sign the voluntary petition for commitment, or whether she did it of her own free will."

William F. Jardine, who took Dorothy to the asylum March 22, 1921, arrived at the institution while the acting Governor was there and did not come out when the latter went away.

Robert Homans, Boston lawyer and a trustee of the asylum, arrived just before Jardine and went away with the acting Governor.

Lieutenant-Governor Fuller, who is acting executive in the absence of Governor Cox, went from his Back Bay residence to the asylum by automobile and alone, except for the chauffeur who drove his car.

He entered the administration building at 3:45 and was escorted directly to Superintendent Packard's private office.

The acting-Governor reappeared from the private office, accompanied by Superintendent Packard, who escorted him across the main hallway to a door opening on an underground passage. They disappeared down the passage which leads to another building that gives access to Codman Hall, where Dorothy is.

Twenty minutes later Mr. Homans arrived and went into the passageway, presumably to follow the acting Governor and the superintendent to the meeting with Dorothy.

A moment or two later William F. Jardine, whose effort to be re-appointed guardian of Dorothy brought opposition from the girl's uncle, John D. Gardiner arrived at the asylum and pursued the same trail along the passage.

In about twenty minutes more, or some forty minutes from the time the acting Governor arrived at the administration building, he emerged from the passage into the main hall, accompanied by Superintendent Packard and Trustee Homans. Dr. Packard escorted the two others to the acting Governor's car, which had been waiting in front of the administration building.

Reporters flocked around seeking a statement from the acting Governor.

"Did you see Dorothy?"

"Yes, I did."

"Who was at the conference?"

"I would rather not say."

According to a story reaching authorities at the asylum, an attempt was to be made to steal her away from her room by force. Consequently, armed men spent the entire night walking back and forth about the grounds, keeping a close watch on all automobiles that passed near the place, scrutinizing everyone who walked down the road, and allowing no one to cross the grounds until satisfactory proof of identity had been given.

EXTRA NURSES ON GUARD.

Extra nurses were on duty about the girl's room, and Codman House, where she is located, was heavily guarded.

Attorney John L. Sheehan, representing John L. Gardiner, her uncle, said that he expected Dr. Packard, superintendent of the institution, would allow him to take the girl to court when time came for her to testify. If Dr. Packard did not, he said, he would swear out a writ of habeas corpus that would compel the authorities to release her.

The attorney denied reports that he has already secured such a writ. He added that he did not believe he would need to get one.

The exact nature of the testimony Dorothy will give at the hearing was not disclosed. It is expected, however, that she will describe her life in the asylum, will tell every detail of her relations with Jardine, and will recount to the court how she was subjected to the dreaded "camisole," and the other forms of discipline in vogue at the madhouse.

TO PRODUCE RECORDS.

Dorothy's statements as to her treatment in the asylum will not go uncorroborated. For Dr. Packard has promised Attorney Sheehan that he will produce in court all of the hospital records relating to Dorothy's case.

These records list every detail of the treatment accorded the young heiress. They disclose the exact number of times she was bound in the camisole; the exact number of times she was strapped to her bed all night; the exact number of times she was "quieted" by means of drugs or warm baths.

And, furthermore, Dr. Packard himself will take the witness stand.

"Dr. Packard was a changed man when I interviewed him yesterday," said Mr. Sheehan. "After a conversation with him, in which a considerable number of misrepresentations by Jardine had been cleared up, Dr. Packard ignored Jardine's orders and let us go in and see Dorothy.

"I told Dr. Packard that he had been misinformed by Jardine, and after we had talked the matter over, Dr. Packard admitted, 'Probably I have been misinformed.'

"Dorothy talked to us in a perfectly rational manner, and at no time did she exhibit any trace of irrationality. She was more than pleased to see Mr. Gardiner, her uncle, recognizing him, of course, instantly, and her face was wreathed in smiles when he appeared. We talked for half an hour, and I secured information of the utmost importance."

Mr. Sheehan intimated that sensational disclosures will come when hearings on the case are resumed on November 24.

"Say," he said to the reporter. "You fellows have only skimmed the surface of this so far. Before we get through you'll have things to write about that will make what has gone before seem tame."

The attorney took occasion to compliment the newspapers of Boston for the way they have handled the story of Dorothy Gordon's plight.

"The papers have rendered a great public service in presenting all of these facts so fully," he said.

Gardiner has gone back to his home in Long Island to await the resumption of hearings. He will, of course, return when court opens again.

It is expected that Jardine's testimony will be completed in one more day after the hearings are resumed. Then Sheehan will produce the taxi driver, who drove Dorothy to the asylum in March, 1921, at the instigation of her uncle.

This man, whose name has not yet been revealed, will tell how the girl became panic stricken when she discovered where she was being taken, how she beat on the windows of the machine, and begged the driver to stop and let her out.

HOSPITAL RECORD.

After the driver has testified, Dr. Packard will probably be called with the hospital records. Then, it is expected, a number of the girls who attended Dorothy's finishing school, the "House in the Pines" at Norton, will take the stand and testify as to the girl's saneness and rationality while she was in school.

And then Dorothy herself will appear, to furnish the crowning sensation of a trial that has been more sensational already than any other similar hearing in Massachusetts' legal history.

Whether Dorothy will return to the hospital after she testifies, or will be kept out at liberty, Attorney Sheehan said is yet undecided. It will depend largely, he said, on the course events take between now and the time she takes the witness stand.

Sheehan Predicts More Startling Disclosures

Sensational disclosures, exceeding in importance anything that has yet come, will be made when hearings on the Dorothy Gordon guardianship case are resumed on November 24.

This was predicted by Attorney John L. Sheehan, counsel for the girl's uncle, John D. Gardiner.

Speaking to reporters, he said:

"You fellows have only skimmed the surface of this so far. Before we get through you'll have things to write about that will make what has gone before seem tame."

LIEUT.-GOV. ALVAN T. FULLER.

HOW FULLER WAS LED VIA SECRET PASSAGEWAY

At top, panoramic view of the McLean Insane Asylum, where Dorothy Gordon, heiress, is held as a patient. Below is view of entrance to secret entrance through which the Lieutenant-Governor was ushered today when he called on the girl to learn the truth of her strange case. The Lieutenant-Governor declared Dorothy told him she wanted to stay in the asylum.

Father Planned to Have Dorothy Acquire Fortune

Frederick Davis Gordon deeply loved his daughter Dorothy.

Unwilling to have her buffeted about by the hard world that he knew as a business man, Mr. Gordon planned to have his child acquire the major portion of his fortune.

As he lay dying in 1914, Mr. Gordon revoked an earlier will and drafted a new one. In it he apportioned to Dorothy $10,000 cash, 2,895 shares of stock in the Gordon Supply Company and the residue of his entire estate after certain bequests had been made.

These facts have become known as the searching investigation of the Gordon case continues toward its probable conclusion with the $400,000 heiress, again free of mental and physical bondage, free to love and live as she has not been during her incarceration at McLean Hospital.

ESTATE IN LITIGATION.

Shortly before his death Mr. Gordon gave a controlling interest in the supply company to his sister, Mrs. Hughes. When this gift became known after the death of Mr. Gordon, litigation was immediately started by another sister and a niece and nephew who sought to have the will set aside.

But ere the litigation had entered the Supreme Court, after an appeal from a lower court decision, Dorothy's mother, her guardian, made a settlement with the relatives which resulted in Mrs. Hughes relinquishing her controlling interest in the company to Dorothy.

It was stipulated in the agreement that Mrs. Gordon was to become president of the company, and Mrs. Hughes was to be elected treasurer. Each was to receive a salary of $5,000 a year.

Clarence and Melville Hughes, sons of Mr. Gordon's sister, were to receive $40 and $35 per week, respectively, for a period of five years, this being their present salary status with the company.

BUSINESS LEFT TO DOROTHY.

It was expected by the dying Gordon that upon the death of his wife, all shares and other property bequeathed to her would then accrue to Dorothy. This would have made her not only heiress to a large fortune, but the head of a growing business that would create newer and larger fortunes.

Dorothy's mother was appointed administratrix with the will annexed, but she died before she was able to close it. This procedure was finally brought about by Frank C. Curtis of Warwick, R. I., administrator for her estate, who also became special administrator of her husband's estate in her place.

During the progress of the various litigations Dorothy was in the care of Charles F. Day and Roscoe P. Owen, both of Boston, as temporary guardians appointed by the court.

The court records betray the fact that Dorothy legally became Dorothy Gordon when her parents were allowed to "adopt" her.

Jardine's Checks Pay Lodger's Alimony

During the airing which the affairs of all the principals in the Dorothy Gordon guardianship case have received, it was learned that checks signed by William Jardine, the girl's guardian, have been used by George R. Bennett to pay alimony to Mrs. Bennett, pending disposition of a divorce brought by her.

Bennett is a lodger in John home. Some of the checks sent his wife are signed by Jardine and made out to him.

Mrs. Bennett is suing on the grounds of cruelty. Her counsel said they believe Bennett used this method of paying the temporary alimony so that she could not attach his bank account.

Defends Use of Straitjacket

Dr. Lovell F. Wentworth, assistant commissioner of the Department of Mental Diseases declares that the use of straitjackets and "camisoles" in hospitals for the mentally defective is considered entirely proper.

If an inmate tries to harm himself, Dr. Wentworth says the straitjacket is considered a suitable means of preventing him doing so. Under certain conditions, he added, the use of drugs to quiet a patient is proper.

His statement is slightly at variance with one previously made by his superior, Dr. George M. Kline, who intimated that Dorothy was strapped up because there were not sufficient nurses on hand to attend all the patients properly.

More Jews Needed Safe for Life For the President Imagination Cures

There are not quite fifteen and one-half million Jews in the world. Only a little over three millions in the United States. It would be better for this country, for manufacturing, distributing and general pacemaking if there were six millions here, instead of three.

His trade is thieving. He has spent fifty years in jail, chiefly for petty larceny.

MAID SAYS HEIRESS SANE WHEN PUT AWAY

Ever since her mother came to a death as tragic as her romance, a subtle, but systematic, effort was made to undermine the mentality of Dorothy Gordon. This was hinted today by John L. Sheehan, attorney for John Gardiner, Dorothy's uncle.

It was substantiated in part by the testimony of a person who, up to today, has not figured in the case—found today by the Boston American. She is Mrs. Margaret Wallace, a young woman who, for months, was the confidante of Dorothy.

Until she was thirteen years old Dorothy lived a happy, normal life at her uncle's home in Baldwin, Long Island, with Gardiner's son, Jack, as her playmate. There was no trace then of any insanity or abnormality of any kind.

The abnormal manifestation began only when the child came within the circle of the influence of Mr. and Mrs. Jardine and she was told that a new life was before her. She was to be brought up to be a grand lady. She was wealthy. She was to be educated and trained for the highest circles of society.

This was emphasized to the point where it became a monomania with Dorothy.

At the point when she was obsessed with the idea of a brilliant social future she was told that she was an illegitimate child.

And this information did not come from her mother, or from her uncle, or from her guardian-to-be, or his wife. It did not come from any close friend or confidante. It came from Mary Coakley, a servant in the Jardine house.

Out of a clear sky the child's vision of high birth of brilliant social destiny was scattered.

She was told she was suffering from a hereditary disease of the mind.

Mrs Wallace relates that whenever the Jardines were with Dorothy there was a subdued tone to the atmosphere.

"Dorothy would be petted and spoken to as though she hadn't the brain of a ten-year-old child," Mrs. Wallace told the American. "She seemed to be another girl when the Jardines were around—strangely silent and unresponsive. I could never understand it. She seemed particularly afraid of Mrs. Jardine."

Mrs. Wallace lived in the Jardine house as maid and companion. She is the only person up to this point in the strange story of Dorothy Gordon, who was at any time a member of the Jardine household, who has come forward to give an account of the happenings in that house.

The imprisoned heiress liked Mrs. Wallace, who was then Miss Bruce.

ASYLUM WAS TABOO.

In her conversation with other members of the household, she appeared perfectly rational. It was only when she was in the presence of the Jardines that she seemed to be ill at ease and not herself, Mrs. Wallace said.

"After Dorothy was taken to the hospital it was two weeks before Mrs. Jardine wenht to see her," Mrs. Wallace said. "That was in April, and during the whole Summer after that she did not go near the place. Mr. Jardine visited her only at long intervals.

"The subject of Dorothy's commitment was a closed subject after she went. Rarely did anyone ever discuss it at the house. Once or twice I asked Mrs. Jardine about it, but she refused to talk about it and forbid my discussing it with anybody else. The subject was taboo.

DIDN'T RETURN KISS.

"On one occasion I visited the asylum with Mrs. Jardine. We found Dorothy strapped to a bed. Mrs. Jardine leaned over and kissed her. Dorothy did not return the kiss. Then I kissed her, and she returned the kiss most lovingly. 'Why didn't you kiss me?' asked Mrs. Jardine. 'You don't seem pleased to see me.' Dorothy didn't answer, but began to cry.

"Dorothy was always treated as though she were a child by Mr. and Mrs. Jardine," Mrs. Wallace declared. "Whenever either one spoke to her they spoke as one speaking to a small child. I never could understand that attitude.

"LOVELY YOUNG WOMAN."

"Other members of the hospital, visitors to the house and relatives of the Jardines always treated her as a grown up and she always conversed with them in the same way.

"To me Dorothy Gordon was a lovely young woman.

"I was the most surprised girl in the world when I came home the day that Dorothy was taken away. As soon as I got in the house I noticed that Dorothy was not there.

"'Where is Dorothy?' I asked of Mrs. Jardine.

"'She has gone crazy,' answered Mrs. Jardine, 'and so we have taken her to the McLean Hospital.'

"I did not say anything more. I broke down and cried."

Mrs. Wallace saw Dorothy in the McLean Hospital four or five times during her incarceration there. The second time she went she went alone.

It was Easter time, she explained. Mrs. Jardine had bought an Easter lily for Dorothy. She asked George Jardine, Mr. Jardine's brother, to take the lily.

"He would not go," continued the young woman. "He told Mrs. Jardine that he did not consider Dorothy insane and he told her it was an injustice for her to be there. So I took it out.

DESCRIBES VISIT.

"Dorothy was extremely pleased to see me that day. She was brought into the waiting room by a nurse. Once or twice she got up to walk about. The nurse ordered her brusquely to sit down. She said that she couldn't sit down as she wanted to be doing something.

"The nurse finally ordered her to sit still. She spoke in a menacing manner. Dorothy appeared frightened and sat down. The nurse then turned to me and said: 'You see how she wants to fight us.' But I did not think that she was fighting.

"Once I talked with Mr. Jardine's mother about Dorothy's commitment. She told me that to her 'Dorothy would always be the same loving and sweet child that she had always been.'

"Mrs. Jardine, senior, never would believe that Dorothy was insane, even in the mildest form.

"For hours at a time Dorothy and I talked of the things that would naturally interest girls of our age. We used to sit together and she would tell me of her school life. At the House in the Pines, the private school which Dorothy was attending, she was very active in sports.

"She played on the basketball team there and on several occasions she appeared in school theatricals. She showed me many snapshots and pictures that she and her chums took, and she told me of many of their girlish pranks and experiences."

"INQUIRY NOT WELCOME."

"The subject of Dorothy's commitment was a closed subject after she went. Rarely did anyone ever bring it up in the house. Once or twice I asked about her, but my questions were not answered. I could plainly see that inquiry was not welcomed.

"A few days after she was taken to the McLean Hospital Mrs. Jardine sold all of Dorothy's clothes. I thought that strange at the time, because I had believed that she was to be confined there only a short length of time.

"Mrs. Jardine told me that the money she obtained from the clothing was to be put into Dorothy's banking account."

The Gordon finances and the fortune which the girl would inherit on her coming of age was often discussed in the Jardine household, according to Mrs. Wallace.

PROTESTED XMAS GIFT.

She told of one incident in which Mrs. Jardine protested because Dorothy did not give her a bigger Christmas present of money.

"That year Dorothy gave the members of the family presents in cash," stated the former companion.

"Mrs. Jardine told relatives in my presence that she was very much disappointed with the present. A girl as rich as she is should have given me much more," she said.

"A few days before we had gone on an automobile trip with Mr. and Mrs. Jardine," continued Mrs. Wallace, "Dorothy, Ellis Jardine and I sat in the back seat.

"I noticed that Ellis and Dorothy were holding hands. Later Ellis put his arm around her waist and later he leaned his head on her shoulder, and she leaned her head toward his.

"During a discussion of her little affair with Ellis Dorothy told me that Ellis had asked her to marry him. She refused him, she told me.

SHE LIKED ELLIS.

"'Why, I though you liked him,' I said. 'You know I saw you holding hands and making love in the back of the automobile,' I told her.

"'I didn't think you saw us,' she said. 'I do like Ellis very much.' She smiled and didn't say anything more about the matter that day.

Mrs. Wallace went on to tell of the numerous "parties" that were given at the Jardine homes on Massachusetts avenue and at Winchester. These "parties," she claimed, were given when Dorothy was away and all precaution was taken by the household to keep knowledge of them from the young heiress.

"Many couples used to come to the 'parties'," Mrs. Wallace declared. "Considerable liquor was drunk and often times the celebrators became intoxicated.

According to Mrs. Wallace, Dorothy did not dislike her uncle, Jack Gardiner, as has been claimed.

WAS FOND OF UNCLE.

"I remember at Christmas Dorothy received a card from Mr. Gardiner. On the card was printed a pretty and appropriate greeting. Dorothy read the card, smiled and turned it over to Mrs. Jardine, saying, 'Here is a card from Uncle Jack.'

"'Yes,' said Mrs. Jardine. 'I see he is trying to get around you now that you are almost of age.'

Accord ng to Mrs. Wallace the Jardines endeavored to hide the fact that Dorothy was in an insane asylum.

"I was told that if anyone asked for Dorothy I was to say that she was still at school.

"I never told anyone that," she said. "Whenever I was asked about Dorothy by outsiders I would change the subject."

Dorothy a 'Voluntary' Patient

DOROTHY'S KIN LEFT IN POVERTY

Grandmother of Heiress Held in Asylum Ignored by Jardines in Her Want

While Mrs. Katherine Gardiner, step-grandmother of Dorothy Gordon, the McLean Insane Asylum heiress, lives in comparative poverty in Roxbury, William F. Jardine, guardian of the girl, has never seen fit to give shelter to the aged woman.

Jardine's apparent neglect is brought out all the more in relief by his own admission that while he kept Dorothy in the insane asylum he was charging her $50 a month for an unused room in his home. Mrs. Gardiner is the widow of the late William Gardiner, father of Dorothy's mother and John Gardiner, who is seeking to oust Jardine from the guardianship.

Bent, wrinkled, rheumy and bowed with years of suffering and disappointment, Mrs. Gardiner told the story of the romance of Dorothy's mother today to a reporter of the Boston American. Poverty is written all over the tiny quarters Mrs. Gardiner occupies at No. 1102 Tremont street, Roxbury, where she pays $40 a month rent—$10 less than Dorothy is forced to pay for a room she does not use.

VERY HAPPY FAMILY.

This is her story: "More than thirty-five years ago I married William Gardiner, father of two very beautiful children. There was Elizabeth, and there was John, who is now fighting to save Dorothy from a living tomb. We lived at No. 1 Ohio street, Boston, and we were all very happy together.

"Mr. Gardiner died nine years later, leaving me with two children. Betty went to work for the Gordon Towel Supply Company. It wasn't long before it became apparent that the proprietor of the business began to take an interest in her that was more than just a business interest. Dorothy was born.

DOROTHY A BRIGHT CHILD.

"During the years that Dorothy began to grow up Mr. Gordon took excellent care of her and of Betty. His wife refused to consent to a divorce, and only death made possible the marriage between Gordon and my stepdaughter.

"He, too, died, a short time after he married Betty and gave Dorothy her legitimate name. Dorothy was sent to a visiting school. She used to come to see me week-ends. She was a bright child and she got along famously in school.

"Shortly after the death of Mr. Gordon Betty became friendly with the Jardine family. In company with my stepdaughter, Mrs. Jardine used to visit me quite often. I never cared for her or for her husband, but Betty seemed to trust them.

"Before the death of her mother Dorothy used to visit me almost every week. After Betty passed on the visits stopped. I saw her the night before her poor mother was buried. I have never seen her since.

"Six years ago I began to get word of the cruel treatment Dorothy was receiving from the Jardines. I communicated at once with John D. Gardiner, Dorothy's uncle and my stepson.

"For six years John Gardiner has been fighting Dorothy's battle, and I know he will win.

"Many times I have wanted to go to Dorothy and tell her about the fight to get her freedom and her rights, but the Jardines have never permitted me to see her, either at their place or at the hospital."

HEIRESS, AND OFFICIAL PROBING CASE

PACKARD DEFENDS ASYLUM

Declares Miss Gordon Decided Herself to Become an Inmate

Dr. Frederick H. Packard, superintendent of the McLean Asylum, today gave the Boston American a complete recital of all events concerning Dorothy Gordon from the day she first stepped into the asylum to the present.

Dr. Packard stoutly defends the asylum and maintains that he is not interested in either William F. Jardine or John D. Gardiner, but is concerned only in the welfare of the young heiress.

"I know nothing of either Mr. Jardine or of Mr. Gardiner," said Dr. Packard. "They both may be fine men or they both may be scoundrels. I am caring for the patient."

MET HER 18 MONTHS AGO.

"About eighteen months ago," said Dr. Packard, "Mr Jardine came to me and said that Dorothy was not feeling well, that she was blue and depressed. He said that he had called in Dr. Crowell, the family doctor, and that Dr. Crowell was also worried.

"Dorothy came to the administration building of the asylum willingly and sat in the reception hall. I did not see her at that time. Dr. Hoch talked to the girl and advised Mr. Jardine to get her under supervision immediately. He also told Miss Gordon that he thought she should come to the hospital. She said 'I'll do that.'

"Dr. Hoch handed Miss Gordon an application which she read. He also read it to her. Then Dorothy signed it and also said verbally that she wanted to come here.

"UNFIT TO BE AT LARGE."

"Dorothy Gordon is here willingly. She understood what she was doing, and she signed her application understandingly. She has gone through a very bad illness, but is beginning to get better. She is still sick (mental) and her improvement has not been sufficient to make me think she is a fit person to be at large.

"Dorothy has never demanded her discharge. She has told me that she wants to remain here until she is well."

Dr. Packard said that he had given this information to Acting Governor Fuller.

"I would like you people," continued Dr. Packard, "to allay the biase kindled by the newspapers. People about the State have gained the impression that a person can be confined in an asylum against his will.

HAS NOT BEEN ABUSED.

"Aside from this, it seems to me that the trial, instead of having to do with Dorothy's sanity, is a matter of property control. I am not interested in the attempt to show why Mr. Jardine should be removed. I am only interested in the care of the girl and her personal welfare.

"There has apparently been an attempt to show that Dorothy Gordon has been abused. She has not been abused here. Dorothy came here in July on an emergency commitment. She was a very sick girl. Her illness during the following months was very severe. After eighteen months she showed improvement and was taken out to drive by Mr. Jardine, and then was discharged.

SPOKE WELL OF JARDINE.

"Dorothy's feeling towards the hospital was apparently friendly.

JAPS VITALLY INTERESTED IN TURKS' PLAN

London, Nov. 15. (By the Associated Press).—The British Foreign Office, it was stated today, has telegraphed to France and Italy declaring the main Turkish demands to come before the conference at Lausanne are not regarded favorably by the British government.

Lausanne, Nov. 15 (By the Associated Press).—Japan, like the United States, has a vital interest in the question of Turkish capitulations, sure to be considered at the Near Eastern Peace Conference here next week.

Sweeping denunciation of the capitulations, which are extra territorial rights granted to foreigners in Turkey, and which the new Nationalist government in that country wants abolished, would affect Japanese plans for the extension of economic relations with Turkey.

Recent installation of a Japanese legation at Athens and the launching in the Greek capital of a big illustrated magazine, "The Near East," devoted to fostering commercial relations, indicate the aspirations of the Japanese to expand their trade in Near Eastern zones.

The Japanese have no treaty with Turkey. Therefore they benefit from the capitulations only as one of the signatories to the Treaty of Sevres. They would like a commercial treaty according them most favored nation treatment.

FIREMEN SET FIRES TO GET ACTION

Freeport, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Four prominent members of the volunteer fire department, charged with setting fires "just to get action for the department and stir up a little excitment," were arrested today. Henry Wiebold, chief of truck company No. 1; Dwight Boland, Rudolph Himmell and Fred Plump, Jr., the men arrested, have confessed, the police assert.

PLUNGES 50 FEET AT NEW BUILDING

William B. Long, employed on the construction of a building at St. James and Berkeley streets, fell fifty feet down an elevator shaft today. He was taken to the City Hospital with multiple bruises on his head and body. His name is on the danger list.

BOOTBLACKS BEG TO BE TAXED $25 A YEAR

Newark, N. J., Nov. 15.—The strangest request ever received by the city clerk of Orange was opened by him today. Signed by a number of bootblacks, it read: "We hereby petition your honorable body to tax us $25 a year for a license."

PONZI INVESTORS DECISION UPHELD

Ponzi investors who obtained their original investment without interest cannot be compelled to pay back this money to the Ponzi trustees.

Judge George F. Morris of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals so ruled today and thus upheld the opinion handed down by Judge George W. Anderson months ago.

The decision was given in the cases of Benjamin Brown of Revere, who received $1,200; Patrick Horan, Roxbury, $1,600; Harry Holbrook, Hollston $1,000; H. W. Crockford, Winthrop, $1,000; Frank W. Murphy, Belmont, 1600, and Thomas J. Powers, Boston, $500.

PONZI CARRIED MILLIONS IN HIS POCKET

"I have $100,000,000 in international reply coupons held in reserve by banks and other institutions.

"I have the equivalent of $8,000,000 to $9,000,000 in American money for use in business."

Charles Ponzi made these statements to postoffice inspectors and assistant United States Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher in the latter's office on July 24, 1920—a few days before his business was closed.

Stenographic report of Ponzi's statements at that conference was introduced by Special Assistant Attorney-General William Flaherty at the Ponzi trial today.

"I have more than $1,500,000 in my pockets," Ponzi also asserted. Upon which, the report went on, he showed two certified checks, one for $1,500,000, the other for $150,000.

Ponzi at that conference said he did not actually send money abroad, but used money he had abroad at the time.

But his international reply coupon business, he said, was merely "preliminary to something bigger."

He intended, among other things, to start a different system of banking and divide profits between stockholders and depositors.

"I am going to make Boston the largest importing and exporting centre of the United States.

"I need the popularity," he went on. "If I make 100 per cent. I will keep 1 per cent. and spend the other 99 per cent. in charity."

SAYS DOROTHY IS VOLUNTARY PATIENT

for she came here frequently after her discharge and visited nurses and others she had met while here. Sometimes she came to me for advice. She always spoke well of Mr. Jardine in my presence. I never heard her say anything against him.

"I don't believe it possible for anyone to be put in an insane asylum in this State and be detained when he ought not to be detained. Within the past ten days a representative of the State Department of Mental Diseases has visited the hospital and has seen Dorothy Gordon.

"Dorothy Gordon's trouble takes form principally in a desire to kill herself. She has tried to gouge her eyes out and do herself bodily harm. At times we have had to make use of a restraint sheet and at other times a camisole.

CONDEMNS COLD PACKS.

"Cold packs have not been used at this hospital in fifteen years. I think they are bad for a patient and only make him worse. It is bad enough to be tied up in cloths without having them wet.

"Dorothy's tendency to a desire to kill herself is not so manifest now and I believe she is on her way to gravated by her coming here. If she hadn't of come voluntarily she would have come on a commitment. She was on her way to her severe illness on high gear.

"Most of Dorothy's improvement has come in the last six weeks. She does not talk much, sits in her room alone a great deal and scolds at imaginary voices. She complains of being annoyed by these imaginary voices.

"The reason I did not let Mr. Gardiner see her was that I had been told that her uncle had tried to kidnap Dorothy while she was at a girls' school in Connecticut, and she was terribly afraid of him."

MRS. JARDINE TOLD HIM.

Dr. Packard admitted that it was Mrs. Jardine who told him this about Mr. Gardiner.

"No matter what anyone says," continued Dr. Packard, "my own opinion would prevail. I would even bar the father and mother of a patient if I thought a visit from them would harm the patient.

"Dorothy was not frightened when she finally saw Mr. Gardiner. She recognized him, smiled and talked with him."

Mass. General Hospital Joins in Gordon Probe

The Massachusetts General Hospital today stepped into the investigation concerning the confinement of Dorothy Gordon at the McLean Insane Asylum. Robert Homans, member of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts General Hospital, accompanied Acting Governor Alvan T. Fuller on the latter's inspection of the hospital and visit to the confined heiress.

The McLean Hospital for the Insane is conducted by the Massachusetts General Hospital. Officers of this corporation are: President, Dr. Henry P. Walcott; vice-president, David P. Kimball; treasurer, Charles H. W. Foster; secretary, Francis C. Gray; trustees, George Wigglesworth (chairman), Charles H. W. Foster, Nathaniel T. Kidder, John Lowell, Joseph H. O'Neil, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Thomas B. Gannett, William Endicott, John R. Macomber, Sewell H. Fessenden, Robert Homans, Algernon Coolidge.

State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long said that under a law enacted in 1884 the State appoints four of the trustees of the Massachusetts General Hospital. The four appointees on the present board are Messrs. O'Neil, Gannett and Fessenden and Mrs. Thayer.

OUGHT OVER TAXES.

For years McLean Hospital has been exempted from taxation as being a part of the Massachusetts General. But McLean is a private and profit-making institution. The town of Belmont protested against the tax exemption of McLean, especially the profit tax exemption.

The courts upheld the town of Belmont and taxes are now being collected from the asylum. The Massachusetts General Hospital sued to recover these tax payments and was defeated up through to the State Supreme Court. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court has been pending for two years.

In the meantime an agreement has been reached between the hospital officials and the town of Belmont whereby the State Legislature passed a bill exempting the personal property and buildings of such institutions as the McLean and taxing the land.

Quebec, Nov. 15.—A dispatch from Bersimis on the North Shore of the St. Lawrence reported the drowning of eleven persons in the Lake of Shelter, Bay River, thirty miles from the seashore.

A gasoline launch containing eleven passengers was sunk and all the passengers perished, according to the meagre details which have reached Bersimis.

Among the passengers was Rev. Father Tortellier, a missionary who was formerly stationed at Bersimis. It was reported that the boat and its occupants had not yet been found.

Church Dedication Is Put Off for Debut of Miss Rockefeller

New York, Nov. 15.—In order not to conflict with the debut of Miss Abby Rockefeller, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the dedication reception of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, recently completed, has been postponed from Wednesday evening, November 22, to the next night.

The church, including the site, cost $1,500,000, and the Rockefeller family gave a dollar for dollar for every other contribution made to the building fund.

HITS TEACHER WHO PUNISHED HER BOY

Mrs. Susie Driver drove two punches to the jaw of Miss Helen Dooley, sixth grade teacher in the Theodore Lyman School, East Boston, according to charges made today.

On the stories told to Clerk John S. C. Nicholls of East Boston Court by Miss Dooley and Headmaster George Tynzer, a complaint was issued against Mrs. Driver of assault on the room teacher.

The encounter arose, it is said, from Mrs. Driver's resentment of punishment inflicted on her twelve-year-old Arthur by Miss Dooley.

Mrs. Driver appeared in the school corridor and met Miss Dooley.

"Why did you punish my boy?" Mrs. Driver asked.

"Because he was unruly," replied Miss Dooley. Then, as the story is told, she advised the mother to see Headmaster Tynzer, and turned to reenter her classroom.

Bing! Bang!

That is the answer Mrs. Driver is alleged to have made in form of two blows on the room teacher.

DRUG TRAFFIC HIT DEATH BLOW BY NEW REGULATIONS

U. S. OFFICIALS FOLLOW LEAD OF HEARST

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—Drastic regulations governing imports and exports of narcotic drugs were issued today by the newly formed Federal Narcotics Control Board, to strike a death blow at the fast growing "dope" traffic which has wrecked the lives of hundreds of thousands of persons and which has been one of the main causes of crime in the United States.

The regulations, the most sweeping ever drafted to curb the drug evil, provides:

1—No cocaine shall be imported into the United States.

2—Reduction of number of ports of importation to only four—New York Philadelphia, St. Louis and San Francisco. Heretofore imports were allowed through Boston, among other cities.

3—Storing of narcotics at public bonded warehouses forbidden. All imports must be stored at the appraisers stores at the port of entry, under constant guard.

4—Only companies "actually engaged" in the manufacture of derivatives of opium and coca leaves, shall be allowed to import, thus barring thousands of druggists and other persons from importing.

FOLLOWS HEARST CRUSADE.

These regulations follow a far-reaching investigation by the Federal Narcotic Control Board, which was established by Congress at the behest of the newspapers operated by William Randolph Hearst in his nation-wide crusade against the drug traffic.

Investigators for the board traced the movement of drugs from other countries to America, and their course in this country. It was found that "huge quantities" were finding their way from the legitimate channels into the hands of "dope" peddlers and drug addicts.

USE MANY DISGUISES.

It was found that drugs were coming into the United States under the guise of rags, straw and other worthless articles; that there were numerous fake robberies as well as genuine thefts of "dope" from warehouses because of lax precautions.

An actual shipment of morphine labelled something else was traced from the port of entry to Cuba, where it was presumably designed to smuggle it back into the United States for unlawful purposes.

Boy Drowned

Providence, Nov. 15.—While playing on the edge of the Phillipsdale Reservoir today Thomas Barr, Jr., six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barr, fell into the water and was drowned. Police recovered the body.

"Homeless"

MRS. D. M. LESSER.

Mrs. David M. Lesser had plans all made to move from No. 47 Charles street, Dorchester. Mrs. Benjamin Kadets objected, saying David owed her a light bill. David denied it. Everything was moved out but one big rug. Mrs. Kadets is guarding the flat. Meanwhile, Mrs. Lesser is unable to settle her new apartment. She is much disturbed.

AMOSKEAG MILL STRIKE OVER; PARLEY ON

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 15.—The great strike of Amoskeag mill operatives, in progress since February 15, practically ended today when a special committee of the executive committee of the strikers conferred with Agent W. F. Straw, representing the company, relative to terms of re-employment.

These terms must include a provision that there be no discrimination against former employes and that the wages which prevailed before the strike must be the schedule to be paid now. The workers will not go back at the 20 per cent. cut in pay continues in effect.

The strikers contend that they won their fight for a forty-eight-hour week by an overwhelming vote of the people in the recent State election.

When the strike started 18,000 employes went out. Since then between 3,000 and 4,000 have left the city. About 3,000 have returned as strike breakers.

Women Waste Two-Thirds of Cash They Spend

Columbus, O., Nov. 15.—That 85 per cent. of all money in circulation in this country passes through the hands of women who receive only one-third value for it was an assertion made by Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson of Dayton, addressing a convention of building and loan men today. The building and loan men are to be enlisted in a campaign in Ohio to interest women in financing matters so they may be able to obtain "value received."

MEXICO TO U. S.—"NOW YOU BEHAVE"

Washington, Nov. 15 (By the Associated Press).—The Mexican Embassy has made representations to the State Department against the alleged lynching of a Mexican, Elias Villareal Zarate, in Weslaco, Texas, last Saturday, and asking guarantees for the Mexican Consul in Hidalgo, Texas, whose life is said to have been threatened.

GALLIVAN HURLS CHARGES AT "DRY" CHIEF

Washington, Nov. 15.—Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes was grilled today by the House Appropriations Committee, preparing the Treasury supply bill.

Failure to enforce prohibition, waste of funds, violation of Constitutional rights of the individual citizen and other abuses were charged.

Haynes asked for $9,000,000 for the fiscal year, 1923-1924, beginning July 1, and for 200 more field agents, estimates approved by General Lord, director of the budget.

Representative Gallivan of Boston, leader of the "wets," hurried from his home, leaving a brother critically ill to confront Haynes' charges alleging failure to enforce the laws and offences of agents.

"The Volstead act played no inconsiderate part in the last election," Gallivan asserted. "The people are not satisfied with the law as it is, and a very large number are demanding modification." He opposed the appropriation and employment of additional agents asked by Haynes.

Gallivan's fight will be carried to the floor of the House as the "dry" are said to dominate the Appropriations Committee.

GUARD DRY BOOKS; FEAR FIREBUG

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Stalwart men with guns on their hips stood about a wooden structure at Sixth and B streets, once an unassuming government building, but now housing the prohibition enforcement division.

On one of the upper floors are riot guns. In the corridors loafed other men with guns, who scanned the faces of visitors.

All this is due to whispers that have reached Prohibition Commissioner Haynes that bootleggers plan to drop a lighted match in the building which houses the records of the enforcement division.

Until recently the dry unit was located in a rented stone building on F street. Economy forced the removal to a government-owned wooden structure.

LEAVES HIS BED? NOT HIS WIFE!

Kennebunkport, Nov. 15.—The following advertisement appeared in the Kennebunk Star:

"NOTICE—As my husband, Calvin Boston, had a notice in the paper last week to the effect that I, having left his bed and board, he will not be responsible for any debts contracted by me, I wish to notify the public that he never has paid any of my bills, as I have worked the past six years, paying all of my own bills, and that I did not leave his bed, as I bought and paid for the bed and took it with me when I left.

"Also that I think doing all his housework, washing, ironing and mending ought to have paid my board while I was with him, also making all the repairs on his house and paying for them myself.

$15,000 LOSS IN MYRICKS FIRE

Myricks, Nov. 15.—The town's postoffice and general store and a house were destroyed today by a fire which for a time threatened to demolish the centre of the village.

The fire started in the store and postoffice conducted by John Crowther and spread rapidly. Postmaster Crowther saved nothing but the mail.

The flames spread to the adjacent cottage, occupied by Mrs. George W. Luther, and sparks set fire to the roofs of residences of the Rev. F. M. Harris and John Prescott. Firemen from Taunton helped the local department. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

AGED PAIR WERE LOST IN WOODS

Gloucester, Nov. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. George E. Merridew, aged West Gloucester residents, came out today after having spent the night in the woods at Manchester, where they became lost yesterday while gathering evergreens. They came out many miles from where they went in and were hungry and cold, but carried much of the cherished evergreen, which they will make into wreaths for the holiday season.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

CAROL DEMPSTER, who plays Arnee Harrington, the courageous heroine of "One Exciting Night," at Tremont Temple, is a Wolverine by birth and a Californian by bringing up. At the age of twelve she danced for D. W. Griffith in the making of "Intolerance" with the Denishawn School pupils, where her pantomime attracted his attention.

Carol Dempster.

"Come back when you are sixteen," said the director, "and take up screen work." In the meantime, still in early teens, she became solo dancer with Ted Shawn. The dancing and the Los Angels outdoor life gave her the athletic ability that is so well employed in some of the hazardous scenes of the new picture.

Leading lady and near-star at eighteen, Miss Dempster may be described as a four-film girl, her featured productions being "The Girl who Stayed at Home," "The Love Flower," "Dream Street," and now "One Exciting Night."

JACKIE IN "DADDY."

A TITLE has finally been found for Jackie Coogan's new picture that follows "Oliver Twist" from the releasing hands of Associated First National. It is to be called "Daddy."

In its production stages the story was called "Fiddle and I," but investigation proved that the title had already been used, and so another was sought.

"Titling a photoplay," says Jack Coogan, Sr., "is harder than deciding on a name for a first born. In the latter case there is usually some precedent established and the name is John or James or William, unless circumstances argue in favor of Mary or Jane. But there is never any precedent for the christening of a play or if there is, you can't use it because it has been used before.

"However, we seem to have come happily out of our perplexities and Jackie's next picture will be called 'Daddy.' Mothers in pictures have had many an idealization. In this picture, dad comes in for a little tribute. The hero of the plot has three daddies, in fact, before the story is told, and each one is designed to appeal to that 'paternal instinct,' which is seldom invoked in vain."

ELAINE INJURED.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN is resting up for a few days at home, recovering from cuts and bruises which she received when she dove into the rapids of San Joaquin River, just outside of Fresno, for scenes in the Selznick production, "One Week of Love."

The rapids at this point have a speed of twenty miles per hour and before Miss Hammerstein could be pulled out of the stream she had been carried a quarter of a mile down the river and severely bumped over a score of sharp rocks and boulders.

THEDA BARA.

THE return of Theda Bara to the screen promises to be one of the most interesting film events of the coming year. She is and always has been one of the really famous film personages and at the height of her popularity she was perhaps the most interesting of all motion picture stars. At any rate, she attracted the most attention.

Miss Bara's following, and it is a big one, will be extremely anxious to see with what success she takes up the cinema career she so suddenly abandoned. Indications are that the young lady will be better than ever. One thing is certain she is more beautiful than ever before.

Lewis J. Selznick is determined that Miss Bara's return will be a most auspicious one and is sparing no effort which will tend to bring about such a condition. The actress herself is fully confident of success and such feeling is accompanied by an enthusiasm which cannot help but be beneficial.

BLAME DEAD ENGINEER FOR MISSOURI WRECK

Washington, Nov. 15.—Primary responsibility for the Missouri Pacific train wreck at Sulphur Springs, Mo., August 4, in which 24 persons were killed and 156 injured, must rest upon Engineer Glenn of train No. 4, one of the dead, according to a report made to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by its safety inspectors. Glenn, whose train ran into the rear of train No. 32, failed "properly to observe and be governed by automatic block signal indications," the report said.

BOOST IN COAL PRICE UNFAIR, PHELAN INSISTS

James J. Phelan, State emergency fuel Administrator, today charged the Metropolitan Coal Company with raising the price of coal $1 a ton the day before the advisory committee of the Boston fuel committee was to meet to decide "a fair price."

He made the charge in answer to a printed statement by President Hamilin of the coal company.

Mr. Phelan, discussing this statement, which appeared in the form of an advertisement, said that he hoped the cost of the advertising, $2,100, would not be passed along to the consumer and declared there is nothing at this time to warrant an advance in coal prices.

WED HIS SISTER ONLY FOR A JOKE

Binghamton, N. Y., N. Y., Nov. 15.—The marriage on election day by a justice of the peace of John H. Creiger, seventeen years old, and his sister, Elisabeth M. Hafner, was merely a foolish prank, the authorities who have been holding the boy in custody have decided. The couple remained over night at the home of the boy's aunt, but did not assume marital relations, the boy asserts.

Humane Agent Korbel said he was convinced there was no reason for holding the couple on any charge and that the only legal way to be taken would be an action to annul the foolish ceremony.

The brother and sister had been separated since they were infants until a few years ago when they met in New York. Corbel says he is strangely innocent for a present-day boy of seventeen and knows no more of worldly matters than a boy half his age.

HONDURAS REFUSES POPE'S APPOINTMENT

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 15.—The Honduran government has refused to accept the appointment of Monsignor Isidore Carrillo, Bishop of Managalpa, Nicaragua, as archbishop of Honduras. The refusal was made in spite of the fact that the appointment of the prelate was made by Pope Pius XI.

Woodhouse Heir

DOUGLAS WOODHOUSE.

MRS WOODHOUSE TO TESTIFY IN OWN BEHALF

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 15.—The Woodhouse million dollar alienation of affections suit will enter its most dramatic stage tomorrow when Mrs. Dorrit Van Deusen Stevens Woodhouse, the beautiful plaintiff, is expected to take the witness stand to tell of her blasted romance.

She charges that Lorenzo Woodhouse and his wife, Mrs. Mary Kennedy Woodhouse, used their great wealth and influence to persuade their son, Charles Douglas Woodhouse, to leave her a few months after their marriage in 1918.

Before the plaintiff testifies, her counsel will introduce two more depositions. One of these is from Dr. Harry R. Slocum, who attended Douglas Woodhouse at the Long Branch, N. J., Hospital, where the have "whirled abruptly and left the sick room when she saw Dorrit at her son's bedside."

Another deposition is that of Mrs. Margaret Auld Edwards, wife of Clement Edwards, an American consul in Lithuania, who was with Dorrit when the latter encountered her husband on the street in Washington while he was in the company of Mrs. Lillian Hendrick McClellan, a divorcee and society woman to whom he is alleged to have become engaged while married to Dorrit.

Arthur W. Hill, assistant cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of which Lorenzo Woodhouse is president, testified today that Lorenzo Woodhouse maintained a personal account at the Merchants' Bank which showed a maximum balance of $500,000.

Tokio, Nov. 15 (By the Associated Press).—Japanese newspapers print the decision of the United States Supreme Court holding Japanese ineligible for naturalization as American citizens.

No comment was made, except in the case of the Hochi Shimbun, which said it was impossible for Japan to do anything because that would mean interfering in American domestic affairs.

"For the time Japan will just have to look on," added the paper.

MARTIAL LAW IN CHILEAN QUAKE AREA

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 15 (By the Associated Press).—Scarcely a house remains standing in the Vallenar valley in northern Chile as the result of the earthquake and tidal wave of last week. The extent of the disaster in the provinces of Atacama and Coquimbo became known today with the reopening of telegraph communication.

In the two provinces the victims number 1,500. But it is expected the number of dead will be increased when communication is resumed with villages in the interior.

Dispatches from La Serena told of serious damage at the Topo mines.

Martial law has been declared at Vallenar and Copiapo owing to looting by bandits who are believed for the most part to be prisoners who escaped from the jails.

SOCIETY MEN ADMIT FRIENDSHIP FOR GIRL SUING WHITNEY

BOMB IN DANCER'S SUIT

Evan Fontaine's Letters to Husband in Possession of the Defence

New York, Nov. 15.—Affidavits filed at Nyack by counsel for Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney set forth that other wealthy and socially prominent New Yorkers were acquainted with Evan Burrows Fontaine, beautiful dancer, and later regretted their friendship.

The dancer is suing young Whitney for $1,000,000, alleging breach of promise to marry.

Affidavits gathered by investigators for the Whitney family, disclosing the bonds between several New Yorkers and the dancer from Texas, are in the possession of Justice Tompkins.

These papers were presented by the Whitney attorneys in their fight to set aside as fraudulent the annulment of her marriage to Sterling L. Adair, a sailor, who has since committed suicide.

NAMES KEPT SECRET.

Justice Tompkins at Nyack is now pondering over a voluminous mass of affidavits, letters, photos and court testimony.

Among the affidavits are several names, the signers of which have not been put on record. They are well-known men who attest their regret at having met the dancer.

County Judge Patterson, of Natick, of counsel for the Whitneys, said:

"If those names were to be made public, it would be like throwing a bomb among several hundred society folk.

"We had intended to allow the names to go into the court record, to show the activities of this young woman and her mother, but we decided at the last moment that we did not require the names so we have omitted them."

The lawyers decided that the strongest trump they had was presentation of five ardent love epistles from the dancer to Adair.

After reading of these letters, containing many intimate allusions, Justice Tompkins said that it appeared to him that the court had been deceived when it annulled the marriage on June 27, 1922.

Here are bits of testimony from the annulment action, the dancer as the witness, and Tompkins as interrogator.

Q.—And you were married in the Municipal Building in New York City? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you never lived together? A.—No, we separated three hours after.

Q.—Did you ever see him again? A.—No, mother said he attempted once or twice and then went away.

COPIES OF LETTERS.

As against this testimony, the Whitney attorneys have presented to Justice Tompkins a mass of affidavits from probably one hundred persons to show that Miss Fontaine and Adair lived together for more than a year in New York and Newport News.

The framework of the Whitney action may be summarized thus, as quoted by Attorney Patterson:

"We have proof that the young woman had been living on terms of intimacy with Adair for at least a year. In one of the letters now in possession of Judge Tompkins she referred fondly and proudly to the expectation that she would soon bear him an heir.

"In another letter we have absolute proof that after Miss Fontaine had met young Mr. Whitney and had encouraged his attentions she wrote to Adair, telling him in so many words that she had nothing against him, but she had met this young man of wealthy parents and she asked if he wouldn't please be a good boy and step aside and allow her to annul the marriage."

In the event that the court sets aside the annulment, counsel for "Sonny" Whitney will undoubtedly move for dismissal of the million-dollar suit.

FLIES 90 MILES, BUT HAS NO HUMAN PILOT

Washington, Nov. 15.—The pilotless army airplane, equipped with an automatic control device said to be more accurate and dependable than any human pilot, has been developed to a point where it has made successful flights of more than ninety miles, it was announced by the army air service.

The announcement declared the results produced constituted the "most important post-war development of the many novel ideas of new engines of war." It was added that the experiments had shown it to be possible to "shoot" bomb laden planes, without pilots, at targets on or off the ground with astounding accuracy.

"Stolen" by Sailor

STELLA BIBLIS.

Her father, Michael Biblis of Charlestown, believes his daughter, missing since Sunday, was abducted by a sailor. He has found four love letters to the girl.

The finding of four letters purporting to have come from Paul Carovina, a sailor attached to the U. S. S. Bushnell, has convinced Michael Biblis, of No. 5 Mount Vernon place, Charlestown, that his fourteen-year-old daughter, Stella, has been abducted by the sailor.

One of the letters dated from Providence, October 27, says: "Stella, I love you and I'll see you some day if you care that much. I certainly acted funny that night. I think I must have been a little bit bashful, don't you think so?

"Listen, Stella, I don't care who you are or what you are. I love you all the better. Some day I will ask you to be my wife. That is if you care that much for me."

Stella disappeared last Sunday and has not been heard from since. She left the house to attend church. She met Carovina at a Boston theatre a short while ago. The father know but little of her acquaintance with him.

PREMIER LAW 'CONFIDENT' OF TODAY'S VOTE

London, Nov. 15 (By the Associated Press).—The electorate of Great Britain swarmed to the polls today in England, Scotland, Wales and Ulster to elect the fourth Parliament of the reign of King George V. The polls opened at eight o'clock and by nine o'clock tonight the new House of Commons will have been selected.

Prime Minister Bonar Law discarded his native caution and declared he had "very considerable confidence" that the electors would give him an independent Unionist majority.

Gamblers in the London insurance market had to pay a rate which indicated a majority of Conservatives and Independent Unionists, but the odds were 7 to 2 against the Conservatives getting a majority of eighty or more.

The anti-labor papers expressed considerable fear of apathy among the electorate.

David Lloyd George in an overnight message to the electors urged them to support "candidates who are opposing socialism as laid down in the manifesto of the Labor Party."

On the other hand the Asquithian daily press pleaded with the electors to vote Liberal where there was a Liberal candidate. Otherwise, it urged them vote Labor.

What to Watch for in Today's British Elections

CITY TO ERECT HUGE XMAS TREE

Boston is planning a great celebration for Christmas Eve.

A huge Christmas tree will be erected near the Parkman bandstand on the Common. The Beacon Hill carol singers who annually add a colorful touch will be asked to carry out their part of the program so that it will coincide with the program of the Christmas committee for the City of Boston.

Carol singers and other musical groups will be at the Christmas tree on the Common throughout the evening. Smaller trees will be erected in various parts of the city.

It has been proposed that an official City of Boston Christmas card be presented to every guest stopping at a Boston hotel as a reminder that this city remembers strangers on the holiday.

DOUBLE BILL AT SAN CARLO OPERA

A double bill at the Boston Opera House drew applause from the large audience that called for repeated curtain calls. "Cavalleria Rusticana" was the first on the bill. Gladys Axman, as Santuzza, was especially pleasing. Turiddu, who appears as the favorite of all the village maidens at the festivities, has a clear voice that does much to help the performance.

"Pagliacci" was equally well received. Sofia Charlebois, as Nedda, sang her role well.

$250 to $500 SAVED on FAMOUS PIANOS

Priced Less Than Original Cost

This Announcement should be particularly interesting to thoughtful, conservative people who know piano values and who are intelligent enough to recognize and appreciate an opportunity of this kind. In the following list are pianos that are brand new and pianos that have been used so little that they show not the slightest perceptible depreciation in looks and absolutely no lessening of tone value. As a matter of fact I feel safe in saying that you could not tell most of them from brand new pianos. The saving I make you on them including the high grade new pianos is, compared to original price, very substantial and worth investigation by intelligent buyers.

FUGITIVE, SHOT BY POLICEMAN, DYING

Stanley La Monte, twenty-two years old, a waiter, living at No. 11 Blackwood street, Back Bay, is dying at the City Hospital after being shot through the lung by policeman John C. McCarthy.

In company with a man named "George," La Monte had tried to sell to the Silverman Fur Store at No. 611 Washington street, five fur coats worth several hundred dollars. The price asked was $100.

The police were notified. When three patrolmen came to investigate, La Monte and his companion fled.

Thousands of pedestrians were on the street when the chase began. McCarthy ordered the fugitives to halt and when they failed to comply he fired, aiming at La Monte's legs. His gun kicked up and the bullet pierced the man's back.

La Monte told the police that he had been released from the Charles street jail on Wednesday and obtained work as a waiter in a Dover street lunch room.

He met "George," who asked him if he wanted to make some easy money, so went along with him to try and sell the coats.

Wounded In Chase

STANLEY LA MONTE.

The police records show that La Monte has served several jail sentences for larceny since 1913.

Two of the coats which the pair endeavored to sell bore the marks of Springfield manufacturers. Police say they were stolen.

TOW DISABLED SHIP AFTER A'R CALL

New York, Nov. 15.—The steamship West Hematite, bound from Hamburg to New Orleans, has been taken in tow by the steamer Saucon after sending out distress signals.

The West Hematite several days ago reported by wireless had boiler trouble. Another radio message today said she was disabled and drifting about 1,100 miles East of New York.

A later message received here by Lykes Brothers, indicated the West Hematite would be towed either to New Orleans or New York. She carries a crew of thirty-three.

SOUTH END BONDSMAN HELD IN GIRL CASE

Louis Goldberg, professional bondsman of No. 4 Milford street, South End, was arraigned today before Judge Pomeroy in Municipal Court on a charge of enticing Katherine Bennett and Christine Porter, both of No. 59 Union Park street, for illegal purposes. The case was continued a week.

GARY TESTIFIES STEEL PRICES AREN'T FIXED

Washington, Nov. 15.—The Federal Trade Commission can demonstrate that the trade custom of selling steel products on the basis of prevailing Pittsburgh prices is due to combination in restraint of trade, Judge H. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation testified before the commission today, the [illegible] ought to be running out [illegible] not only illegal but unconscionable."

[illegible] concedes that as a business [illegible] does not mean that [illegible] know that the Pittsburgh basing practice has grown naturally [illegible] normally, without any combination [illegible] to the law of supply and demand."

K. E. Steinhauser, attorney for the commission, suggested that to affect the law of demand and supply "you can always have a shortage in Chicago by shutting down your mills there and thus bringing in the Pittsburgh base."

"Yes, but how long do you think we could keep it up?" Judge Gary queried. "Manufacturers run mills and do business to make money.

DISTILLERS PROTEST TREASURY RULING

Washington, Nov. 15.—Distillers today filed a formal protest with Commissioner Blair, claiming that the new Treasury decision makes it impossible to continue business. The new decision requires each distiller to put up a $100,000 bond, 25 per cent. of which would be forfeited "if there be any false statement in the application for a permit." The distillers point out that under this clause a casual clerical error in making out an application would cost $25,000. Commissioner Blair has promised whatever relief he could apply and it is possible the decision will be modified.

COULDN'T COLLECT FOR MOUSE IN FLOUR

A charge of selling flour "containing a foreign substance, to wit, one dead mouse," against the Atlantic & Pacific Company was dismissed today by Judge Ahearn in Roxbury Court.

Mrs. Mary Hawkes of No. 15 Burrell street, Roxbury, testified that she had sent her daughter, Aileen, to the company store at No. 595 Dudley street, for five pounds of flour, part of which she used for cake and that in the remainder she found the mouse.

Cross-examination disclosed she had consulted with Walter McMurray, the manager, relative to settlement and had said that she thought $500 was a fair amount.

ASSERT MRS. HALL FOLLOWED RECTOR ON NIGHT OF MURDER

NEW WITNESS SAYS SHE APPEARED ANGRY

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 15.—Two officials associated with the Hall-Mills murder investigation on behalf of New Jersey told newspaper men in New Brunswick that several persons, heretofore unmentioned in the case, will appear as witnesses before the Somerset County Grand Jury at Somerville next Monday and that their testimony will be startling.

One witness, the officials said, will tell of having seen Mrs. Frances Noel Stevens Hall, widow of the murdered rector, hurriedly leave her home at 8 o'clock the night of the murder or fifteen minutes after her husband left for his appointment with Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

HIGHLY EXCITED.

Mrs. Hall, according to the new witness's narrative, appeared to be either very angry or highly excited. Reaching the west entrance to the Hall place, she is said to have run a full block along Nichol avenue. Dashing into the home of her cousin, Henry Carpender, wealthy New York broker and vestryman of the Church of St. John.

Mr. Carpender is now a patient in Middlesex General Hospital at New Brunswick, recovering from an operation for appendicitis performed Monday morning by his brother-in-law, Dr. Laurence Runyon.

MRS. HALL'S DENIAL.

If the story of the unnamed witness stands up in the Grand Jury investigation it would vitally affect Mrs. Hall's account of her movements the night of Sept. 14, when Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were slain.

When he was told of this witness Timothy Newell Pfeiffer, counsel for Mrs. Hall, pointed out that at 8 o'clock the night of the murders, Mrs. Hall said she was in her home playing with her niece, and that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carpender—he is rarely called Henry—were at dinner with J. K. Rice in Highland Park, across the Raritan River from New Brunswick.

From persons in close touch with the plans of Attorney Mott it was learned that the appearance of all scheduled witnesses at Somerville will reveal the State's case as stronger than supposed. These men, several of them officials, said Mott has been working in his own way without regard to what does or does not appear in print concerning his activities or the operation of detectives assisting him.

BELIEVE CASE STRONGER.

Every landmark figuring in the "eye witness story" of Mrs. Jane Gibson, has been carefully checked up by a squad of detectives working under Detective James Mason.

The detectives visited the scene of the murder last night and went over the route followed by Mrs. Gibson on the night of the crime. Weather conditions were similar last night to those on September 14.

Mrs. Gibson told of passing through a certain piece of brush into a little clearing. The detectives found this same clearing by following the path Mrs. Gibson said she had trodden.

Many Novelties Planned to Entertain Boardwalk Patrons, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

NOW comes the news that a Midway—with all the grand and glorious "fixins"—has been added to the long, long list of features for the Atlantic City Boardwalk Exposition, which comes to town December 1.

Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch has charge of the Midway, and there are those who feel sure that she will deal just as capably with the problem of the hot-dog stand and the hoop-la booth as she does with the weightiest of legislative problems.

Mrs. Rotch says that it may be impossible to erect a Chute-the-Chutes or a Ferris Wheel, but that every other attraction of the usual beach midway will be there. I expect to see the debutantes "shoot at the ducks," or throw rings for "Ladies and Gentlemen, the most Bee-oo-ti-ful Lamp Shade Dolls on the beach," with truly admirable enthusiasm. It's rather hard to get the debbies enthused about anything.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON and her group of co-workers continue to plan all sorts of delicacies with which to tempt the palate of those who patronize "The Hut." The latter is the Boardwalk's restaurant, its proceeds to go to Boston's disabled ex-service men.

Mrs. Anderson, by the way, was among those attending the performance of "Boheme," presented by the San Carlo Opera company on Monday night. Mrs. Anderson, who was in a box with Mr. Anderson and some of their friends, was as simply attired as ever, her gown of black silk traced with slender threads of gold. During the intermission Mme. Tamaki Miura, the petite Japanese prima donna of the San Carlo, visited for a bit in the Andersons' box. It was quite interesting to see the former Isabel Perkins and her husband chat with the tiny Nipponese, for Mr. Anderson was at one time American Ambassador to Japan, and, of course, the Andersons lived there for some time. Mrs. Anderson, in fact, wrote a book on her experiences and impressions of the Oriental country, which was widely read.

MISS MARY JAMES, wrapped in a gorgeous red silk shawl, was also in a box at "Boheme." She wore a wide, black bandeau of velvet about her head.

In another box party was Miss Rebekah Hobbs, whose dark hair was set off most effectively by her gown of white tulle with silver-studded shoulder straps. Mrs. Philip Saltonstall was there, wearing a most attractive gown of salmon-colored velvet. Of the debutantes in the audience was Miss Louise Sprague, whose presentation took place about a fortnight ago.

APROPOS of opera, there was, of course, a brilliant throng in attendance at "Tosca," the opening performance of the Metropolitan Opera company in New York.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, who only recently closed their Summer place at Beverly for the season, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson in their box. Their guests including also Mr. and Mrs. R. Thornton Wilson and George B. Post. Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson—the latter formerly Miss Mildred Mason of Boston—and their daughter, Miss Louisa Stedman Wilson, were in a box party as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, who had also with them Messrs. Austen Gray and Theodore Crane.

I expect that, as usual, quite a contingent of Bostonians will go over to Gotham for some of the "Met's" performances.

THE hospital committee of the Army and Navy Service Committee, Inc., is giving a bazaar on Thursday, November 23, at the home of Miss Eugenia Gardiner, No. 15 West Cedar street.

The proceeds of the sale, in which a number of society women are interesting themselves, will be devoted to the comfort and work for the wounded veterans in the hospitals. Tea will be served at the bazaar from 4 until 6 o'clock.

ON Thursday evening, at the Milton Club, will be held the first of a series of dances in aid of the Little House Settlement of South Boston. Among the hostesses for these dances are Mesdames Robert Saltonstall, Bernard Trafford, James Lawrence, Philip Dalton and James Russell. There is a long list of distinguished patronesses for these dances, tickets for which may be had from Mrs. Ralph Emerson, Mrs. William B. Wood and Mrs. Tarrant King, who comprise the committee.

MISS ELIZABETH PERCIVAL

Miss Elizabeth Percival, daughter of the David C. Percivals, whose presentation took place last week, is one of the many debutantes who will serve at the Boardwalk Theatre during the Atlantic City Boardwalk's Exposition nine-day stay in Boston.

4 MINNESOTA JAILS FULL OF LIQUOR MEN

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 15.—That he was severe in sentencing liquor violators "because the law never can be made effective unless I am severe," was the statement today of Judge Page Morris of the United States District Court. "Easy sentences don't accomplish anything," said the Federal jurist, "and I am sending liquor law violators to jail wherever the statutes enable me to do so." Four county jails in this district have been comfortably filled with Federal paying "guests" since Judge Morris started his campaign.

There is always a best

And most people want the best especially when it doesn't cost any more. Sometimes it may even cost less in the long run, as in the case of the Royal Typewriter! Perhaps you have not realized that there is on the market a better-built typewriter, a finer writing machine. Typewriters are not all alike. There must be a best.

LOGUE IN PLEA TO FREE MISS MacSWINEY

(By the Associated Press).

Dublin, Nov. 15.—Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, suggests the release of Miss Mary MacSwiney from Cork jail, where she has been on a hunger strike for eleven days.

His suggestion was contained in a telegram to Kevin O'Higgins, Free State Minister of Home Affairs. The message said more harm would be caused by detaining the women prisoners in Ireland than by liberating them.

A message requesting the Cardinal to inform the Holy Father that the jail chaplain refuses the sacraments to Miss MacSwiney was sent to him over the signatures of Mrs. Pearse, mother of Patrick H. Pearse, Provisional President of Ireland," who was executed during Easter week, 1916; Mrs. Eamon Ceannt, whose husband also was executed Mrs. Charles Burgess, widow of Cannon de Valera's Minister of Defense, and Mrs. O'Rahilly, who was recently released from prison. They dispatched a similar telegram to the Secretary of State at the Vatican.

Cleveland—Establishment of a co-operative bank by the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York will not interfere with the plans of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers to establish a co-operative National Bank in that city within ninety days, Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative National Bank, announced.

Baltimore—Two investigations of the airplane accident at Logan Field, in which Lieutenant Edwin G. Shroder and his passenger, Lieutenant Francis A. Marsh, 3d, or Easton, Pa., was injured, were begun.

A campaign on night walkers has been started by Captain Perley C. Kneeland of the Back Bay station. Three women were arrested by the "vice squad" today.

Muriel Stewart, 27 years old, of Ocean avenue, Revere; Jennie Miles, 21, of Queensberry street, and Anna Wood, 25, of Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, were the names given by the prisoners. Officers Condon and Gimbs found them in the Boylston street and Copley square districts.

William H. Cliff, secretary of the Home Market Club, declared at the annual meeting today "the enactment of the Fordney McCumber tariff establishes the starting point of another era of prosperity for the United States and assures employment for all who wish to work." SAVES DRIVER PINNED UNDER GAS TRUCK

A passing autoist saved the life of Joseph Fauser of No. 114 Boston street, Dorchester, when the tank truck he was driving, containing 1,300 gallons of gasoline, skidded and toppled over on Paradise road between Swampscott and Salem today, pinning Fauser beneath the wheels.

Fauser was taken to the Salem Hospital, suffering from multiple injuries.

The truck toppled over as a result of a tire blowing out on the rear right wheel. Fauser was pinned under when found by the passing autoist, who extricated him.

Apparatus from the Salem and Swampscott fire departments came to the scene and prevented the truck from catching fire. The truck was owned by the Jenney Gasoline Company of Boston.

GEORGE'S BOYS "MAKE IT SNAPPY"

Last night the boys from George's attended a banquet at the Wedgewood, at which Joseph P. Donovan, the manager of George's, played host. A section of the balcony of the Wedgewood was reserved for the boys. During courses entertainment was furnished by the boys themselves, Johnny Riley rendered "Caroline" and made the boys cry for more, Jerry Murray gave a true-to-life imitation of Eddie Foy minus the kids. Bill Casey told stories and McFarlin pantomimed. Rudolph Valentino Morse portrayed a character from "Checkers." Mirick's tales of night life in Waterbury, Ct., were interesting. Donovan and Frank evoked applause with their duet "I Hear You Calling Me." McIlher and Whority presented "He Gets Mad Do Easy." Lyman's rendition of Kipling's "Vampire" was a treat. Hennessy and Sweeney gave an imitation of Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean. Blanchard told some Yale stories, and Chet Curnamus "All for the Ladies" was a scream.

After dinner the boys adjourned to the Shubert Theatre to see "Make It Snappy". The evening was the first of a series of monthly parties of the Georges associates. George's store was a month old yesterday—and has been adopted the slogan, "Watch It Grow."

The profound admiration which careful and critical motor car buyers are expressing for the Dort Six clearly indicates its sound worth. No other car in so short a time has aroused so much favorable comment as is now heard everywhere about this remarkable Six. The new Dort Six forty-five horsepower motor, which is one of the finest pieces of motor design ever conceived, has brought to car owners a new conception of power and flexibility—2 to 60 miles an hour on high gear; pick-up from 5 to 25 miles in less than 9 seconds; 24 miles to the gallon at a speed of 30 miles an hour.

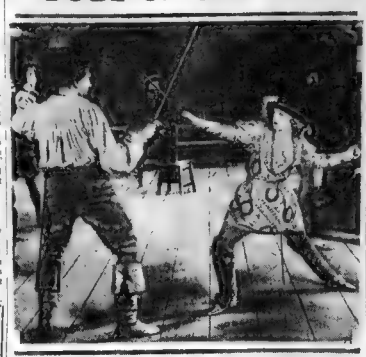
PRINCESS MARY IN DUEL OF SWORDS



MARION DAVIES IN "KNIGHTHOOD"

Marion Davies, as Princess Mary Tudor, crosses swords with Captain Bradshaw (George Nash) at the old Bristol tavern, just as the Princess and Charles Brandon are about to elope to America. The delay caused by the duel enables King Henry VIII to overtake the couple and change the course of true love by sending Brandon to the Tower and his sister to France. This is one of the most thrilling scenes in the great film at the Park Theatre.

'SCANDALS' AT COLONIAL ARE BEST EVER

"George White's Scandals" this season can be set down as the best show the clever little dancing manager has produced yet. The book is by Andy Rice, George White and W. C. Fields, lyrics by Bud de Sylva and E. Ray Goetz, music by George Gershwin.

There are countless scenes and large quantities of dancers. Somebody is nearly always dancing. The girls are beautiful and liberally displayed. The costumes come pretty close to being the last word in beauty and daring. The vulgarity which made last year's "Scandals" unpopular in Boston is missing. It's a fast, clean show, snappy and peppy. W. C. Fields, the prize juggler, is very much in evidence throughout the show. Some of his sketches and travesties are irresistible. Lester Allen is funnier than ever before.

One of the big features of the show is Paul Whiteman's orchestra from the Palais Royal. Mr. Whiteman did not go on tour with his band, but it was carefully trained by him for the trip and its playing of dance music is a revelation.

Among the most striking scenes are "The Modern Eve," seen at the beginning is picturesque itself. Then "Lady Fan" is even more brilliant. "I Found a Four Leaf Clover" is quite as dainty, with the back drop of a sampler of great-grandmother's days. "The Patent eLather Forest," the gorgeous first act finale, which has crowned the achievements of the painters' and designers' efforts but then there is "The Sea" which almost swept the audience off its feet.

Winnie Lightner, a spirited comedienne is good in everything she does, and especially captivating in her character songs. Richard Bold, who possesses not only good looks but a voice of pleasing quality, leads the imposing song numbers in a way that adds to their excellence. The dancing of Pearl Regay is uncommonly good. The Argentinas find favor with their South American dance.

THREE FACE TRIAL WITH NEGRO COP IN GIRLS' CASE

Girl's Hatpin Routs Three Thugs

ATTACKED IN EAST BOSTON

Mary Souza Is Thrown to the Ground, but Jabs Assailants, and They Flee

Three East Boston thugs will think twice before they tackle 16-year-old Mary Souza again.

Thrown to the ground on a dark street the girl managed to pull out one of her hat-pins and jab two of her assailants so ferociously that all three thugs fled.

Mary didn't stop to faint. She ran after them. But they escaped in the darkness. As the next best bet Mary hunted up two policemen and told them. Search is being made for the ruffians.

Mary lives at No. 249 Prescott street, East Boston, and works in a factory nearby. She is ambitious. So she attends evening high school sessions, studying millinery and dressmaking.

She left evening school last night and started to walk home by her usual route. Just as Mary was opposite the Mead, Morrison Mfg. Company's plant at No. 125 Prospect street, where the street is rather dark, three young men jumped at her.

One seized her by the arms. A second clapped a hand over her mouth. Then all three threw her to the sidewalk.

They jarred the breath nearly out of her. But she managed to wriggle one hand up to her hat and pull out a hat pin, a fine, long pin.

"Ouch!"

That was one of the thugs, yelping at the unexpected agony of three or four inches of hat pin speared into his flesh with all the girl's fighting strength.

"Ouch!"

This was Thug No. 2 "getting his."

The two thus jabbed let go of Mary and backed off. This scared the third into letting go the girl, who bounced to her feet.

This was the tip to the three thugs to run. Mary took after them vengefully, but they ducked into Bremen street and were lost.

She met Patrolmen Driscoll and Dunlevy. They made hurried search for any or all of the assailants. But the three had apparently gotten well out of the neighborhood.

Mary put her hat-pin back in place and went home.

BRICKS HURLED AT RALLY IN REVERE

Bricks were hurled through windows in Crescent avenue school, Beachmont, following a rally in the interests of Attorney John DiPesa, Mayoralty candidate.

One woman was slightly cut by falling glass and for a time there was great excitement in the rear of the hall. Janitors today counted more than fifteen broken window panes.

Senator Andrew Casassa was speaking when the fusillade began. He attacked Mayor Noone and the police department. While the bombardment was going on some one stole the motormeter from Mr. DiPesa's automobile.

The campaign has reached such intensity that gangs are roaming the city tearing down opposition campaign banners and numerous fights have resulted. One banner was torn to shreds in the yard of ex-Councilman Arthur Folsom. A neighbor was ordered by his landlord to take down a campaign banner or move.

Charges of graft and corruption are being hurled against the administration and against the police force by Di Pesa and his supporters.

Senator Casassa is charging from the stump that a sergeant and several patrolmen are often seen walking about the streets in uniform while intoxicated, that one of the superior officers is collecting hush money from gamblers and moonshiners; that one distiller has asserted he paid $700 a week to a police official for protection.

FOUR MEN HURT IN CRASH OF AUTOS

Providence, Nov. 15.—Four men were seriously injured in a head on automobile crash on Smith street today. Albert Garnet, 41 years old of Graystone, R. I., was driving a sedan. The wheels hit a rock in the road and he lost control of his machine, plunging into an auto containing William Heath of North Scituate, Frank Cushman, 75 years old, and Fred Face 49 years old of Providence. All four men were cut by flying glass, bruised and injured internally.

WIFE TRIED TO KILL HIM, SAYS DOCTOR

Brockton, Nov. 15.—A blunt charge that his wife deliberately left gas jets open for the purpose of killing him, and a counter-charge by the wife that he caused the death of one of their babies by leaving a window open, featured the divorce hearing in Superior Court, when Dr. Seth L. Strong, Back Bay surgeon, sought freedom from his wife, Clara L. Strong.

The surgeon told of incurring his wife's anger when he refused to move to New York.

CHARGES DEATH THREAT.

"She demanded an apology the next morning because of what I said. I told her here was no cause for an apology. She jumped into my machine, I was just leaving for Boston and she punched me on the head. Then she threw herself in front of my machine and I had to stop. When I again started, she seized one of the children and said I'll kill the baby if you go to Boston."

His wife turned on the gas jets at his Boston office, in the Winter of 919, while they were "snowbound" n the office.

ADMITS LIKING ART.

"Do you mean to insinuate, Dr. Strong, that your wife turned on the as with the intention of killing you?" demanded the wife's attorney.

"That is just what I mean to insinuate," replied Dr. Strong.

The Strongs were married in April, 1907. They have four children.

Mrs. Strong denied any attempt to hit her husbad. She admitted that she liked art.

"I loved my husband dearly, until he brought this suit against me," she said.

She denied that she wanted her husband to move into a $1,400 apartment in New York. She also denied the gas episode at his office and the auto incident.

State Senator Charles M. Austin re-elected last week, was today appointed court officer of Somerville District Court by Judge Malcolm D. Sturtevant.

CAN'T ARREST DRINKER IN PUBLIC

A prohibition enforcement officer has no right to arrest a person he finds drinking liquor in a public place.

Such was the implied ruling today of Commissioner Hayes of the United States District Court, during hearing of a case against Attorney David A. Marshall of the Hotel Westminster, charged with assaulting and interfering with Prohibition Supervisor James P. Roberts.

Mr. Roberts testified he was interfered with when he attempted to arrest a man he found drinking in the dining room of the hotel.

The officer went over to the man and endeavored to seize the liquor. A commotion followed and in the melee Mr. Roberts lost his hat, cane and wrist watch. The man escaped.

"Baseline to Mr. Roberts it was because of the interference of Marshal," Commissioner Hayes in discharging the attorney declared. "Prohibition officers in making arrests for violation of the Eighteenth law must at all times comply with the law."

ANOTHER OLD WAR HORSE WINS HONOR

New York, Nov. 15.—Deceive, the second old war horse to uphold the traditions of the army at the National Horse Show is occupying the limelight today that Moses also representing the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kan., enjoyed yesterday.

Deceive, a thoroughbred gelding, rivals Moses in age, being nearly twenty years old. His particular feat was the winning of the Bereaford Challenge Cup presented by Colonel Lord Decies.

As a jumper Deceive is said to have no superior. He won from a large field, bored by A. H. Reed in Lexington, Ky., and bought by the army for $165. Deceive is as traveled as Moses, who learned to jump on French battlefields and has won prizes in Stockholm and Antwerp.

SAYS 400 WERE FIRED TO OBEY WAGE LAW

Charles F. Dutch, former chairman of the Minimum Wage Commission, today declared that the minimum wage law was passed in this State to protect high minded employes from the exploitation of the ruthless employers "who would take their profits out of the hide and morals of the employes."

Both the pro and anti minimum wage forces got down to their final arguments today before the Special Commission on Minimum Wage and Unemployment.

Lew C. Hill, a brush manufacturer said when the law was first passed his firm discharged 400 employes who were found incompetent to earn the minimum wage prescribed in that industry. The firm could not compete with low-priced labor in other States, he said, yet was willing to pay a fair wage.

"There is nothing to that argument," said Dutch, "because the same law permits the issuance of a special license to cover that class of employes."

Lazus Brown, the first chairman of the commission, said that an investigation of the brush industry had revealed very low wages being paid to women.

Mrs. Arthur Rotch of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters and Mrs. Gardower Evans spoke for the retention of the law. Opponents will make their final arguments next week.

SAUSAGE CO. FINED FOR COLORING MEAT

The Boston Sausage & Provision Company of No. 161 Blackstone street today was fined $25 for using a cold tar product to give meat a red, healthful appearance. Judge Sullivan, in Municipal Court, passed sentence after Inspector Frank Gefley presented a report of the Health Department chemist.

FAILED TO REVEAL HE ASKED FOR BULLETS

He Denied Firing at Young Women's Brother Chasing Him

Three patrolmen of Dudley street station will face trial boards for failure to report that Rudolph Trent, colored, begged for two cartridges after being implicated in an alleged attempted attack on two white girls in which two shots were fired.

The unearthing of this new evidence will mean a new trial for Trent, now under suspension.

Early in the morning of October 31, the Misses Helen and Mae McAdams, twenty and twenty-one respectively, were awakened at their home, No. 1023½ George street, Roxbury by noises just outside their window.

CHASED BY YOUNG MAN.

Their brother, Peter, alarmed by the girls silently opened another window, jumped out and started for the intruder with a club. The man ran. Young M Adams gave chase. He saw that the stranger was colored and later identified Trent at Station 9.

A short distance from the house two shots were fired at McAdams and a few minutes later Officers Kring caught Trent running from the vicinity.

When Trent reached the station house he approached three patrolmen and begged the loan of two shells. The first two refused, but the third man gave him the desired cartridges. These he put in his pistol and then hung the weapon in his locker.

IDENTIFIED AT STATION.

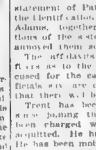
Trent denied the girls' charges. Captain Fitzgerald found his gun fully loaded. The only evidence today before the trial board was the statement of Patrolman Kring and the identification made by Peter McAdams, together with the assertions of the sisters that Trent had annoyed them several times.

The affidavits of the three officers are to the request of the accused for the cartridges, police officials say are of much importance that there will be a new trial.

Trent has been in trouble ever since joining the force. He has been charged with extortion and acquitted. He has shot a prisoner. He has been mobbed and saved and more than 100 Roxbury citizens signed a petition for his removal.

MAYOR KAY BEATEN AT FALL RIVER POLLS

Fall River, Nov. 15.—Mayor James H. Kay was defeated for renomination by Thomas J. Ashton in the Republican primaries by a vote of 8,414 to 7,363. The new nominee is now serving as overseer of the poor and has been a member of the school committee.



James H. Kay.

Mayor Kay has served for five two-year terms. His defeat was a surprise to party leaders. They are now attributing Ashton's success to women voters and city employes, all of whom opposed Kay because of a wage row.

PUPPET HUSBAND OF $30,000,000 WIFE, PRIDE BROKEN, QUITS

MARRIED TO WIDOW OF 58

She Led Him to Teas by a String, Yet Never Introduced Him to Her Friends

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, Nov. 15.—A romance of impetuous youth married to sedate wealth, an alliance between a young man and a society widow worth $30,000,000 is shattered today.

Anson L. Clark, who married Mrs Valera Langeloth, who is fifty-eight, of the Plaza Hotel, in April, 1921, has paid in broken pride and deep humiliation for the brief span of time he was wedded to Mrs. Clark.

When at last, even through his mad infatuation for the widow, he saw that he was but a puppet in her hands, dancing as she pulled the strings, he gathered up the last remnants of his former high spirits and snapped the strings in a dash for freedom and independence.

Mrs Clark, as well as Clark himself, admitted today they had separated a week ago, but no far no steps have been initiated looking to a legal separation.

INFATUATED WITH WIDOW.

Being madly infatuated with the widow of Jacob Langeloth, former head of the American Metals Corporation, who died in 1914, Clark, after a whirlwind courtship won her as his bride last year. He believed she was 33, as she said, and in order to have her friends find out how young a husband she had, he says he himself gave his age as 38 on the marriage license.

But soon after their marriage Clark's love was rudely wounded and his pride hurt, when his fashionable wife took him for walks, to teas, to theatres and to gay parties of the smart set—much as an exclusive dsbutante might take a Pekingese on a string—yet never introduced him to her friends.

SHE LAUGHED AT HIM.

When, awakening from the first rude shocks to his vanity at finding himself not master in his own house or anywhere, he remonstrated with her. She laughed at him. Soon he found that the orders he gave the servants counted for nothing if his wife's wishes conflicted with his, that he had no rights or privileges that were respected, that he counted for nothing but a plaything to be used or exhibited at the caprice of the woman who had promised to obey him.

When the bitterness of his humiliation overcame him, he summoned what fragments of spirit he had remaining after being but a puppet in a woman's hand for a year and a half and left his multi-millionaire wife.

WORCESTER FIRE AT ITS HEIGHT

BREWERY BUILDING IN FLAMES

Four-story structure on LaFayette street, formerly occupied by brewery firm, was destroyed, with a loss of $50,000. For a time the fire threatened to spread to two gas tanks across the street.

BIG WORCESTER FIRE MENACES GAS TANKS

Worcester, Nov. 15—The four-story wooden building at Nos. 81 to 103 LaFayette street, formerly occupied by Bowler Bros., in connection with their brewery business, was destroyed by fire, causing alarm among nearby residents on account of two large gas tanks, the property of the Worcester Gas Light Company, located directly across the street.

Firemen, on their arrival, found the building a mass of flames, and early estimates placed the damage at $50,000.

Capt. James H. Madden of Hose 2, the veteran fire fighter of the department, had a narrow escape as the smouldering embers were being extinguished. Two large cupolas weighing over 100 pounds each, had been knocked over by the water pressure and barely missed Madden in their fall

HAMLIN CALLS UPON PHELAN TO RETRACT

President Edward Hamlin of the Metropolitan Coal Company today issued a fiery reply to State Fuel Administrator James J. Phelan, calling on Mr. Phelan to retract his statement made last Friday that the company's price of $16 a ton for anthracite coal is too high. The reply by Mr. Hamlin follows:

"My company has issued this open letter to James J. Phelan, State Fuel Administrator, calling on him to retract his statement that he is said to have made last Friday, namely, that our price of $16 a ton for anthracite coal was unwarranted. If Mr. Phelan was correctly quoted, he displays gross ignorance of the coal situation, and if he was misquoted, he should set the public right in the interest of honor and fairness with a great company which has served them with equity and high ideals during long years of endeavor.

"The important points regarding the coal situation on which the public should be thoroughly informed are as follows:

"The Metropolitan Coal Company did not lead in advancing prices, but followed far behind the other companies. The $16 a ton for anthracite coal has been the prevailing price in Boston for the last three years.

"Mr. Phelan as fuel administrator, has officially approved a price of $16 a ton for coal delivered in the cities of Lynn and Salem. The cost of coal at the mines and the freight rate either by rail or water is identical with the cost to Boston. If the price is fair in Salem and Lynn why is it unfair in Boston under exactly similar conditions?

"Every city and town in this Commonwealth has a fuel committee appointed by the fuel administrator and he has asked each committee to establish a fair price for its community. The fuel committee of Boston has not stated what a fair price for Boston should be although I have many times strongly urged them to do so.

"When the Boston committee states what in their opinion a fair price for Boston should be, the Metropolitan Coal Company will charge no more than that price and will make their utmost endeavor to obtain all the coal possible which can be sold at that price.

"Anyone familiar with the splendid record of the Metropolitan Coal Company, its efforts to mitigate suffering during the great coal strike, its extensive and efficient aid during the days of the Great War, will look askance on this slight, intended or otherwise, on the good name of my company.

"We will always give maximum cooperation to every official or Fuel Administrator either in town, city or State, but I demand the public be kept thoroughly cognizant of the real facts and not be blindly led by ignorance or misrepresentation.

"Our books are always open to any proper officials. We have been invest gated again and again by Federal, State and city authorities and have never been found unfaithful to the trust reposed in us by the public."

GERMAN CRISIS DUE TO WIRTH QUITTING

Berlin, Nov. 15 (By International News Service).—Germany today faced both an internal and external crisis as the result of the fall of the Wirth government.

Former Chancellor Wirth represented the policy of fulfillment or surrender to the demands of the allies.

Adherents of Hugo Stinnes, industrial magnate, were demanding representation in the government, while the Socialists voted down a proposal for coalition.

It is likely a "bourgeois coalition cabinet" will be formed with representatives of the People's party, Democrats and Centrists.

It is a question how long it could last under attacks of Socialists and Communists, with Winter coming on and a famine of both food and fuel in sight. The mark is down so low it is nearly valueless, and debt and taxation are crushing rich and poor alike.

The Social Democrats are strong yet in the Reichstag, having 180 votes. They have come out for the "fulfillment policy, but refused to enter the Wirth Ministry because the Ministry refused to pledge itself to stabilize the mark before anything else.

Rioting and revolts due to the high cost of living are continuing at Cologne, Duesseldorf and other points in the Rhine industrial region.

In Cologne mobs plundered numerous shops and stores including clothing and grocery stores, cigar and tobacco shops. Many places were completely looted, and what was not carried away was smashed up by the marauders.

11,000,000 BARRELS OF OIL FOR U. S. SHIPS

Washington, Nov. 15.—Contracts for 10,000,000 barrels of fuel oil from the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and 1,000,000 barrels from the Texas Company were awarded today by the Shipping Board. The price fixed is 56 cents a barrel more than paid in the last purchase.

The Standard Oil contract calls for $1 30 to $1 57½ a barrel, according to ports of delivery, and $1 55½ to $1 64 on barges. The Texas Company port prices range from $1 59 to $1.49 and the barge price is $1.55½. Delivery will be made between November 15, 1922, and December 31 1923.

FIREBUG SUSPECTED IN $60,000 LOWELL FIRE

Lowell, Nov. 15.—Two fires in Depot Cash Markets, owned by three brothers, in widely separated sections of the city, are being investigated by Chief Edward F. Saunders of the Fire department, who suspects a firebug. In both cases the fires, which caused damage of $60,000, originated in the basement of the stores. Mark, Louis and Jacob Bogdonoff are the owners.

TROTZY PREDICTS WORLD REVOLUTION

Moscow, Nov. 14 (via London, Nov. 15).—"Our slogan is to sit tight until the red world revolution breaks out," declared Leon Trotzky, addressing the Internationale Communist leaders today. "All we ask is that our foreign comrades give us five years more to prove the advantage of socialism over capitalism."

GRAVES OF 1,775 ARE DESECRATED

Salem, Nov. 15.—A score of graves of Revolutionary heroes in the Charter street cemetery have been desecrated by vandals. Superintendent William Osgood discovered today. Iron markers were torn up, and broken, the slate headstones were chipped and broken by huge stones thrown against them and shrubs were trampled.

The cemetery contains the graves of Governor Endicott and other Colonial dignitaries. It is within a stone's throw of the police station.

SNYDER URGES ONE RAILROAD FOR SECTION

More than 1,000 persons filled the banquet hall of the Copley-Plaza when Frederic S. Snyder was inaugurated as president of the B. C. of C. Chamber of Commerce at the thirteenth annual inauguration banquet of that organization.

Speakers of the evening were Mr. Snyder and Secretary of War Weeks. Mr. Snyder reviewed business conditions and discussed the problems which confront the Chamber.

He discussed in detail the freight rate differentials declaring that they operate heavily against New England business, and expressing the hope that they will shortly be abolished.

URGES CONSOLIDATION.

In regard to New England's railroads, he urged a consolidation of all lines into one system, in preference to the alternative plan of having each road taken over by an outside trunk line. He predicted a satisfactory settlement that would aid New England and Boston business would shortly be arrived at by the committees now discussing the project.

Mr. Snyder praised Mayor Curley's co-operation in the "zoning" plan for Boston, and declared that "the enactment of which would now should insure a more satisfactory development of our real estate, and will protect the initiative of the enterprising men who enter upon real estate development. This favorable effect on real estate will promptly benefit the entire city."

He asserted the Boston Airport, for which the Chamber of Commerce has done so much work, would be ready for use early next year.

He opposed the Great Lakes St. Lawrence waterway, designed to give ocean steamships access to the middle-western lake ports. The project would doubtless open the Western grain market and possibly provide an abundance of cheap electrical power for New England, he said, but he believes the interests of Boston will be unfavorably affected by the provision for more ready access to the Great Lakes through the St. Lawrence.

The proposed 25 per cent. increase in express rates he also opposed, and promised that the chamber would take a hand in the coming hearings at Washington on that subject.

Mr. Snyder praised the policy of business economy in State expenditures instituted by Governor Cox, saying that the government must prevent the already burdensome tax rate from rising further.

Secretary Weeks asserted that it was right that the government should maintain a peace time army sufficiently large to train as the best possible "war insurance."

After praising the army as a school where American young men are disciplined, physically and mentally, the secretary pointed out that almost all of the railroads in this country owe their construction to army engineers and said the fact that the army telephone system is the second largest in America.

The army, he said, has an important place in times of peace, both because of its important research work along scientific lines and its valuable engineering and constructing policy.

KREMER SCORES BIG HIT AT CONCERT

A new comet appeared in the musical sky when Isa Kremer, Russian balladist, came out on the stage of Symphony Hall and began to sing. She has given three concerts in New York since she arrived from abroad fifteen days ago and New York is singing her praises in unusual language, but Boston is inclined to be skeptical of sensational New York successes. Boston is singing the same tune now.

To the original twelve programmed songs, Mme. Kremer added six and could have gone on singing indefinitely for she had the audience crowding down around the stage as near to her as they could get, clapping like mad, stamping their feet and many of these calling loudly for their favorite Yiddish songs. They talked to her from their seats and she answered them—that is the sort of singer Kremer is.

Kremer is a musical institution in this country—there is nobody like her, never has been and probably never will be.

The voice of Mme. Kremer is powerful, resonant, vibrant and in some of the higher tones a bit on edge.

Kurt Hetzel played accompaniments for the singer. He also played three solos from Chopin and Liszt which were too rapidly played to admit all the original beauty of the composition. There was also a tendency to cloud passages with the pedal.

Mme. Kremer is to reappear here in January. It is more than probable that a sold-out house will greet her then.

SENATE MAJORITY AGAINST NEWBERRY

Washington, Nov. 14.—If Truman H. Newberry, junior Senator from Michigan, does not resign between now and the convening of the 68th Congress, he will face, when the new Senate meets, an adverse majority of at least 11 Senators in favor of unseating him. A study of the membership of the Senate after March 4 next shows 53 Senators that are definitely against him, 40 will vote to exonerate him and the position of two others is doubtful.

The Senator has virtually decided to resign his seat rather than subject his party to embarrassment, according to reliable information in political quarters here.

PERFECT PIE CRUST

—and others always fail?

MANY women do not know that the secret of making a light, crisp pie crust, so flaky it will "melt in your mouth", is in the kind of shortening you use.

Animal fats contain water and may not mix so completely with your other ingredients.

This often tends to make "doughy" lumps in your cake. Your pie crust may be tough and hard to digest.

HOUSEWIVES who use Mazola never have this trouble. Mazola is a pure vegetable oil, absolutely free from all moisture. It mixes so perfectly with your other ingredients that every particle gets the same amount of shortening.

Go to your grocer today and get a can of Mazola. Just follow the recipe shown here carefully and see the wonderful results Mazola will get for you.

Work Mazola well into the flour and salt, add enough ice water to hold together (about ¼ cup) and roll out at once. ½ teaspoon of baking powder may be added if desired.

Mickey Walker Draws Line on Tea and Coffee

Johnny Wilson, middleweight champion, does not drink any coffee. Tea is his favorite beverage. He says it is lighter than coffee, and as a result, not so injurious.

Mickey Walker, welterweight king, goes him one better and runs both tea and coffee. We had breakfast the other morning with Walker at the Copley-Plaza and were surprised when he ordered neither tea nor coffee and ordered milk.

"I never drink either tea or coffee," remarked Mickey. "I have discovered that right eating is necessary if one wishes to remain in the best of condition. Milk builds up the body, and does not break it down So I always drink milk."

Mickey took lamb chops and rice made an hearty meal.

I was a late breakfast," continued Walker. "I don't get up until I have dinner around 6 o'clock. I refrain from eating late at night. Not so with Jack Bulger, my manager, who will attack three or four cups of coffee around midnight."

Bulger Was On the Stage for Seven Years

Have you noticed how well Bulger appears when making his speech just before introducing Mickey Walker at the Old Howard. A query brought forth the information that bulger was formerly an actor He showed before the footlights with John Bunny and other stars for seven years. He then hopped into the boxing game and has made a remarkable success. Bulger has always had confidence in Walker's ability to win the world's welterweight championship.

When Mickey and Britton met at Newark a year ago, Britton scored a knockdown in the first round. The youthful Walker regained his feet and came back. He put up such a gallant fight that he won the newspaper decision.

"Walker will be the next welterweight champion," said Bulger after the bout. "Any fighter who can do such a come-back is unbeatable."

Magnates Want Draft, So They Wont Have to Blow Away Their Dough

DRAFT BLOWS IN

POOHER major league clubs are fighting to get the draft back. They're afraid they'll be left out in the cold, when the wealthy boys start buying players. Then they'll have to cough up, and they don't like that.

Clubs with the money don't care about draft. They blow their dough, and breeze in anyhow.

Draft will be discussed at Winter meeting. There's always a big draft at these affairs when sixteen magnates all get talking at once. But it doesn't mean a thing.

Poor owners come to big town and spend a few days, nothing else.

Toss away millions in interviews, but their check stubs don't say a word

They like to strengthen their clubs, but not as much as they hate to weaken their bankrolls.

And whangs his way right through,

And it aint no play at all

Husband (continuing)—Right, o, we'll shoot a little bridge.

Husband (continuing)—Right, o, in half an hour, 'bye. (Hangs up and turns to wife)—What did you say?

NIFTIES

WHY is a football coach like a steak? Because he gets heated up on the gridiron.

When is a ball player like an embryo pancake? When he's the batter.

(We will give three cheers daily to the contributors of nifties tough enough to print).

COACH out in Kalamazoo makes players who fumbled carry football around for a week—to class, to bed and everything.

Tough on the mathematics teacher. He's likely to call off a few numbers and get hit by half a dozen forward passes.

Boys might mistake 'em for hard boiled eggs and gargle 'em for breakfast. Then they'd kick themselves all day.

Coach probably makes birds who miss tackles go around spilling everybody. Athlete calls on flapper and greets her with flying dive to knees. And she can't help falling for him.

NOW that she's over there, it's no doubt perfectly proper to call Isidora the Russian "Isa."

TIGER TACKLES BEST DEFENSE FOR ELI

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Can a couple of tackles stop Yale?

The feller that can answer that query correctly qualifies as an expert estimator of the outcome of the second clash in the "Big Three" series, that involving the Princeton Tiger and the New Haven Bulldog.

Princeton does possess a couple of real tackles in "Pink" Baker and Herb Treat. That brace of bohemoths frightened Harvard's running attack last week, and constitute Princeton's best defensive asset in the game with Yale Saturday.

Except for Baker and Treat, we did not observe a single offensive or defensive factor in the Tiger play against Harvard that should greatly annoy Ted Jones' assortment of gridiron stars.

There was much comment on the play of the Tiger ends, and although it was true they were fast getting in on plays or down under kicks, they missed tackle after tackle, and it was noticeable also that they lacked the weight and physical strength of the ideal modern wingman.

There was some comment on the excellent play of the Tiger guards and center, but it should be remembered that they were put to the test only very seldom in the Harvard game, and the tests they were put to were not to be compared with the tests they will face when Bob "Doc" Jordan, or "Park" Bench, or "Mail" Mallory head into them traveling at top speed.

In Individuals Yale Has a Wide, Wide Edge

Yes, in the matter of individuals both in the line and in the backfield, we figure Yale has a wide, wide edge, and the almost endless number of capable Eli substitutes, carries that advantage into the reserve department also.

There are Yale's three centres, Lovejoy, who is the first string choice; Landis, who was regular centre last year, and Norris, whom many think is more capable than either Lovejoy or Landis. Any one of the three will carry a weight advantage and an advantage in experience over Alford, the made-over halfback, who is playing pivot for the Tigers. There are Cross, Cruickshank, Herr, Lutkin, Storrs, McKay and Pillsbury, all of bruddingnagian proportions, and each with two or three years of varsity experience as guards, to oppose Dickenson, the single veteran guard of the Tigers, and either Snively, a made-over end, or Howard, who made his first varsity start against Harvard last Saturday; there are Miller, Diller, Greene, Joss, Hidden, Qualls and two or three more spanking tackles, who, while not up to the Baker-Treat combination employed by Princeton, are capable of turning in a good afternoon's work; and there are Eddy, Deaver, Hulman, Blair, Luman, Lincoln and Hart, for the Yale wing assignments, all with experience and greater weight than the Tiger wings, and coached by Charley Comsford, a recognized specialist in end play.

Yale's Third-String Backs Better Than Tiger's Firsts

So much for the line.

As for the backfield, it is our conservative opinion that were Yale's third string backs attending Princeton they would railroad the Tiger first string combination to the substitute bench.

What a variety Yale can offer! Jordan, Bench, Mallory, Scott, Haas and Knapp, all powerful line plungers and sturdy interfering and defensive specialists; Neddinger, Neale, Wight, Cochrane, O'Learn, Kelley, Adams and Eckett, all broken field runners of better than average ability, and in that list are punters who can surpass the efforts of the Tiger toe artists, and forward pass specialists every bit as capable as those of the Tiger squad.

And fifteen of those Elis had the benefit that is to be derived from seeing in action the very men they will be called upon to face, and the very plays they will be called upon to check. And it is no ordinary action in which the Princetonians engaged as the Elis looked on.

Goal of the Tiger Season Was Harvard Game

The goal of the Tiger season was the Harvard game. Until the referee's whistle ended that game Princeton had not given the Yale game a serious thought. All season long the defeat of Harvard had been Princeton's big ambition, outmatching even the desire to revenge the Chicago defeat of last Fall, and immediately the latter had been accomplished, diagrams of the Harvard plays were chalked upon the football blackboard at the Princeton field house and remained there for study and instruction until this week, while Nau, Dye, Ommeyer were religiously drilled in Harvard plays and employed them against the varsity for two solid weeks.

Thus Princeton's preparation for this week's battle has been confined to this week, and one week especially after a team has engaged in a rugged battle, is a short space to prepare it for what will undoubtedly prove a much more rugged engagement.

Yale Offence Has Failed to Impress Grid Followers

We don't know what Yale will offer in the nature of an attack against the Tigers. Thus far this season the Eli offence has failed to impress gridiron followers. It has not been lacking in variety, and there has been the suggestion of considerable power and brilliancy in many of its plays, but for one or another reason the execution of those plays has been faulty on more occasions than it has been perfect.

In one engagement we witnessed only a single play found the Elis carrying out their assignments as it was intended they should. That was a quarterback run by Dan Kelley, Yale's third string quarterback with Mallory and Eddy carrying the opposing tackle out of the way and Lasch and Neddinger sweeping the end off his feet, and that play went for thirty-five yards and a touchdown. The pay as it started had a threat of a line plunge, and was made more likely of success through that fact.

In the Brown game and in the Army contest Yale showed it has learned quite a bit of the forward passing game. But even those contests there was little evidence of a real offensive line charge upon the part of the Eli vanguard, and on plays directly through the line the success scored solely dependant upon the power of the charging backs.

We do not know how the Tiger plan to meet the Yale offense we but we do know their task will be much more difficult than was the case when they played Harvard.

War On Gamblers Gets Under Way at N. Y. Clubs

New York, Nov. 15.—The war on gamblers has been started by local boxing authorities with the placing of three men on the blacklist. The individuals in question are to be denied admittance to all New York clubs and barred from association with all boxers and managers.

This action was taken by William Muldoon, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, after a conference with Frank E. Coultry, representing Madison Square Garden; Jess and Ed McMahon of the Commonwealth Sporting Club, and representatives of the Pioneer A. C. and the Rink Sporting Club.

HARVARD FEARS DEFEAT AT HANDS OF BROWN BEARS

CRIMSON WILL USE ALL AVAILABLE STARS

The Harvard football coaching mentors have changed their minds and have decided that as Harvard has one defeat on its 1922 record, a second is not to be countenanced. Therefore, into the fray with the Bear will trot the best of the linemen available and a set of backs nearly on a par with the regulars.

Holder and Jenkins will play the wings, as usual. Eastman will be on the job at left tackle, but Greenough will take "Heinie" Dunker's right tackle assignment. Hubbard and Grew will be in the middle of the mess at their guard positions.

As for "Sakie" Clark, he may trot down to Princeton and watch the Tigers and Bulldogs get mixed up. Charley Buell, on account of his injury, will not bark the signals for the Fishermen. Spalding, Lee and Pfaffman will all be called on to do their share of the steering of the Crimson craft through the Brown sea.

The backfield will be made up of Pitt Coburn, Jack Hammond and "Winnie" Churchill, a sweet trio of ball carriers. Coburn is the best defensive back that Harvard boasts of not even excepting the naughty George Owen.

Churchill, the scintillating sensation of the Crimson 1920 football year, has probably gained more ground for Harvard in proportion to the time he has been "in" than the majority of the regular backs at present. An end run is his meat.

Last Fall when Centre spilled the dope and defeated Harvard, Churchill had the tying touchdown of the game in back of the last white line, but was called back by the referee.

In the Florida game Hammond showed his stuff and it was easy to look at. He is an able punter, drop-kicker and open field runner. That means he has everything possessed by Owen. And the football fans say he will not only step into Owen's shoes but surpass the feats of Harvard's present best threat. Last Fall Hammond was regular fullback on the Crimson cotil.

Now the dope is that Brown has almost an even chance of winning. With the Owen-Buell combination out of the game against the burly Bruins, too much is not predicted of the Crimson chances. Taking these two real gridsters out of a lineup is like taking an engine out of a racer.

NORTHEASTERN CUTS ITS SOCCER SQUAD

The soccer squad at the School of Engineering, Northeastern University, has been cut to thirteen men. The rest of the candidates will continue to report, and while most of the attention will be given to the squad selected, it is still possible for other men to break into the select group.

The men chosen for the varsity are E. Boothroyd, forward; C. Brown, Jr., goal; J. E. Blasdell, forward; P. Davis, forward, J. Ferguson, back; G. Frost, forward; H. C. Jones, forward; C. K. Moore, halfback; T. J. Moran, back; M. Silverman, forward; M. H. Wright, halfback; C. Young, halfback, and K. Young, back.

BROWN ELEVEN TRAINS FOR FORWARDS

Providence, Nov. 15.—Forward passes swamped the Brown eleven at practice. The coaches have resolved that the Harvard game Saturday will not be a repetition of what occurred in the Yale bowl

They feel sure the Brunonian line will be a stone wall against the attacks of the Harvard offence, but they are making absolutely certain that when Harvard, finding the line impenetrable tries her aerial game, the big Bear eleven will not be unprepared

Sweet and Adams, the Brown veteran backs spent much time in punting the ball under "Reggie" Brown's watchful eye, and Adams averaged over sixty yards today. He got them off fast and high. Sweet, although not as long a punter as Adams, is much faster at getting the ball away and is more proficient at drop kicking.

If Brown gets within kicking distance of Harvard's goal, Saturday, there is no question but that a drop kick will be called for and either Adams or Sweet will be the man picked.

BURKE AROUSES DARTMOUTH SPIRIT

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 15. — Chick Burke, Dartmouth captain and star of Big Green elevens during the past two years, showed his old form for the first time this year in scrimmage when he ripped through scrub and varsity lines for gain after gain

Burke put on his uniform as soon as an injured ankle and wrist, ended his team battle Middlebury, Vermont, Harvard, B. U. and Cornell.

Even in the first games of the season he was troubled with injuries and could not make any headway.

The sore of Big Green fans has cheered the hearts of Dartmouth supporters who are once again hopeful for a pleasant finale to the end of a bad season. Victories over Columbia and Brown, although neither game is in Hanover and few students regard them as big enough to accompany the team, will make the season a little more creditable, as both games are letter games.

The work of renovation of the offence was continued in practice and lasted from early afternoon until it was so dark that neither any player nor the ball was discernible It may be that some sort of an offence can be worked up in the remaining day of practice.

Coach Cannell would not say what kind of offence is being developed, but it is doubtful if any more plays are added to the spread formation than the green used for the first time against Cornell

The regulars were scrimmaged for a few minutes, but most of them are still tired from the Cornell battle and were worked out in signal drill on the new plays.

Hank Bjorckman was back in his position at left end in the varsity lineup. Cannell said that he is perfectly satisfied with the game Bjorckman is playing and took him out of the Cornell game only because it was clear that he had an off day. Bjorckman was taken out of the game in the first few minutes after Cornell had swept around his end several times. It came as a surprise to the Green supporters as he had played one of the star games all season, especially against Harvard.

Only one day of practice is left before the squad leaves for New York, again, to meet Columbia Saturday at the Polo Grounds. A light workout this week will not hurt them and all are in perfect physical condition, having worked up to the game last Saturday.

TOMMY LEAHY WINS OVER YOUNG HAMLIN

Worcester, Nov. 15. — Tommy Leahy of Worcester defeated Louis Young Hamlin of Nashua in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Lake A. C.

Billy Campbell of Worcester outpointed Mugsey O'Leary, another local boy, in the eight-round semi-finish.

Irish Kid Williams, of Worcester, got the award over Johnny Griffin of Brooklyn, N. Y., in one of the six-round prelims and Sam Lucci of Clinton won over Young Boone of Southbridge in a second six-rounder.

EDWARDS LOSES TO CURTIN ON A FOUL

New York, Nov. 15.—Danny Edwards lost to Irish Johnny Curtin of Jersey City on a foul in the tenth round of their scheduled fifteen-round bout at the Pioneer Sporting Club. Referee Kid McFarland ruled Edwards had hit Curtin low, although unintentionally, disqualified Edwards and awarded the decision to his opponent.

Manchester Must Bar Rowdy Players

The New England Football Association have sent word to Manchester High School that unless Murphy, Brady and O'Malley of that eleven are debarred for the rest of the season no officials from that body will work in any Manchester game. Murphy, Brady and O'Malley assaulted Fred J. Hoey of this city, after he had officiated as a referee. Manchester has a game with Brockton on Saturday, but if Manchester insists on using these three players the officials from the New England Association will not assist. The New England Association intends to back its members to the limit.

AMATEUR MITT STARS CLASH AT B. A. A.

The Boston Athletic Association will hold its first amateur sparring tournament of the season tonight The classes to be contested will be 112, 118, 126, 135 and 147 pounds, and the best boys in New England at these weights will compete.

Much interest is being manifested in the 112-pound class from the fact that the winner will be sent to Montreal to compete in a special bout at the National A. A. A. on November 21. As we have many especially fine boys at this weight in New England, one of the finest lots of boxers at 112 pounds is expected.

All contestants are reminded that they must comply with the new rules of the A. A. U., in regard to their registration card and also put their pictures on the same and have their credentials ready to present when they weigh in. The weighing in will take place at the Exeter Street Club House between 6 to 7 30 Wednesday night, and all boxers are urged to weigh in as soon as possible.

ALSO RANS WILL TRADE PUNCHES

Tut Jackson is slated to face George Godfrey, a Chicago darkey, in a scheduled twelve-round bout at Washington Court House, Ohio, on Thursday evening.

Godfrey is managed by Jack Johnson who believes he has a new champion.

Jackson and Godfrey might be able to win a title in the Battling Diver League.

That's all.

Penn Star Out

Philadelphia, Nov. 15 —John Dern, the University of Pennsylvania star football centre, will be out of next Saturday's game against Pennsylvania State because of a torn cartilage in the knee.

CASEY CERTAIN TUFTS WILL DO WELL

Despite three successive defeats Coach Eddie Casey is confident that Tufts will regain its early season form and come through the Aggie and B. U. games with flying colors.

Tufts showed its best offensive punch of the year last Saturday, when they tore the Bowdoin line to shreds and counted two touchdowns, although in the second half the men plainly showed a lack of condition and proved unable to stop the rush of the Maine collegeans.

Allie Cohen furnished the surprise of the game and by his terrific plunging proved a regular place in the Jumbo backfield. Casey feels that if the team could get over its fear of forward passes it would be unbeatable. All this season when opponents have threatened a toss Brown and Blue backs appeared to be overcome by fright

On Saturday the Aggie eleven will come down from Amherst primed to repeat the successes of the past two years. The Farmers have one of the best teams of recent years and Tufts will be pushed to the limit to win unless the aerial attack of the Amherst chew can be stopped

This game has become the objective of both colleges and a victory means that Tufts can call its season a success regardless of how the closing contest with B. U. results.

M. A. C. has defeated such strong teams as New Hampshire State College, and Amherst. Bates, which Tufts overcame by one touchdown, is the only eleven to lower the colors of the Aggies this season

SCHWAB TO SEE FIRST BIG FOOTBALL GAME

Easton, Pa., Nov. 15.—Frank "Dutch" Schwab, captain of the Lafayette College football eleven and choice of many experts for All American guard last season, plans to see his first college football game as a spectator on Saturday when Yale meets Princeton in the Palmer Stadium. Schwab has taken part in everyone of Lafayette's football games since he entered college in 1919

EXETER ALL SET FOR BIG ANNUAL TILT

Exeter, N. H., Nov. 15.—Exeter's hard work is over and the daily program will consist of signal drills and formations. Coach Hlack apparently intends to stand by the regular line up, although the backfield has such a strong set of subs or second string players that there may be a shift at the last minute

FREE BOOTERS AND DEBUTANTES MEET

An important contest in Division B of the Boston Field Hockey Association will be played today at the Longwood Cricket Club grounds, by the Free Booters captained by Miss Gertrude Robins of Malden, and the Debutantes, led by Miss Hattie Rathesky of Boston.

KERRIGAN SETS UP NEW SIWANOY MARK

Bronxville, Nov. 1.—A new record for the Siwanoy Country Club has been established by Tommy Kerrigan, the club's professional, who ran third a year ago to Jock Hutchinson and Roger Wethered in the British open championship. He went around in 66.

YALE FAVORITE, 5 TO 4, OVER PRINCETON

New Haven, Conn., Nov 15 Charley Ollwell has not checked Yale's confidence in the ability of its eleven to overpower Princeton. Even the loss of Bill Mallory and Saturday, in Jungletown. The betting odds are still 5 to 4

This indicates to most Yale rooters that they feel that Malcolm Aldrich of Fall River, backfield coach and captain last year, has developed reserve backs capable of minimizing the loss of the two who were respectively, Yale's greatest defensive star and its field general The coaches insist that it is not definitely settled that O'Hearn and Mallory will not start, and say that both these players will be available for part of the contest

It is admitted that Mallory is suffering from his shoulder injury received in the Army game, while O'Hearn has never fully recovered from the pulled tendon received six weeks ago

The coaches declare that it is doubtful that there will be any more scrimmaging before the Princeton game, although a few plays may be ordered

The practice has been of the most strenuous character and has indicated that Yale intends to use Ted Wight for a terrific punting game, calling up Captain Jordan with his 204 pounds of weight to catapult a touchdown over the goal line in case Yale comes within 20 yards of scoring distance.

EAGLE DOESN'T HOLD CANISIUS LIGHTLY

Although practice for the Boston College squad this week is not so strenuous as that which preceded the Baylor game, Coach Cavanaugh is carrying on his program of intensive training. The victory over Baylor is considered on the Heights one of the biggest of the season, but with the two major contests yet on the schedule this is no time for the Eagle to develop cephalic inflation, which in English means the abnormal swelling of the head

Vermont was tumbled by Holy Cross after licking Dartmouth. The same team took Springfield for a fall after the Y. M. C. A. eleven had conquered the powerful Detroit team. The idea of Canisius drubbing the Eagle may seem improbable, but in the world of football funnier things have happened.

Luke Urban and his assistant, Frank Morrissey have both played football under Cavanaugh, and have a fairly good idea of what to expect from the Eagle on Saturday. Remembering how Boston College leaped into fame by defeating Yale, Urban feels that his team would rise above mediocrity by defeating his alma mater, and that victory would force recognition of Canisius as a contender for Catholic college honors

At present, Georgetown, Fordham, Holy Cross and Boston College form the "big four" Jesuit Colleges Canisius is a Jesuit institution, anxious for recognition from its bigger brothers

Cavanaugh Does Not Take the Game Lightly

Coach Cavanaugh regards Luke Urban as one of his best pupils, and does not take the Canisius game lightly. He will send his full strength against the Buffalo invaders Although there is no great fear that Urban's team will prove too strong for the Eagle, yet Cavanaugh is taking no chances

Practice consisted of signal drill and a rehearsal of new plays. It is not likely that Cavanaugh will be forced to uncover any of his new plays for the enlightenment of the Georgetown and Holy Cross scouts who may be on hand. He may, however, uncork some new formations for the edification of his former pupil and his flock of Buffalos

Saturday's game will bring together many of Urban's old friends, the Eagle team, only Comerford and Heaphy remain, of the eleven that Lake once adorned as wing man. Boston College wishes every success to Lake and his team, and would like to see him win all his games but Saturday's

Six New England Men Regular Canisius Team

New England furnishes the country with part of football material and Urban has a goodly share of it in Buffalo. There are six New England men on the regular Canisius eleven and many more subs. The six men who will be among the starters in Saturday's contest are Nig Lynch, Mcormick, Treanor, Donahue, Eagan and Mahoney.

"Nig" Lynch is one of Urban's best bets in the backfield He has speed and driving power which have been a big asset in Canisius' victories this Fall. Lynch specializes on end runs and once past the Canisius defence, he is a hard man to down In all probability Lynch will do the bulk of the ball carrying against Boston College

In Mccormick, Urban claims a worthy opponent for Jack Heaphy. Lake knows Heaphy well, having played with Jack for two years When he has his claim of Mccormick's ability, surely the Buffalo centre must be good

Heaphy has played against the best pivot men in the East in his collegiate career, and has yet to be outplayed Mccormick, no doubt, will give Jack a handful of work, as he is built like a howitzer. He is smart, heavy set and can deliver an awful kick. He is built too close to the ground to be toppled easily, and Jack will probably have to lie flat on the ground and charge against his opponent like an electrified caterpillar.

The Eagle has developed a taste for wild animals of various kinds, including Bears. Saturday the Eagle expects to dine on Buffalo meat, and thus strengthened, enter the Georgetown game a week hence, invigorated

N. E. BANTAM KING IN LOWELL BOUT

Abe Friedman, who boxes Mike Castle of Lawrence at the Moody A. C. of Lowell tomorrow evening, intends to keep busy this season, and is only too willing to meet all opponents in the bantamweight division, and force Joe Lynch to give him a chance at the title. Friedman has matches on at Fall River on December 1st with Frankie Jerome of New York, and the following week he tackles Johnny Curtin again.

Abe Friedman.

A defeat at the hand of Mike Castle would upset all the plans of the clever bantam, so Friedman is not going to take any chances with the hard hitting Lawrence boy, and will be in good condition for this scrap

A capacity house is looked for at Lowell, as the fans there were quick to realize they had a big league bout on when Castle and Friedman were announced for the feature bout.

Pitter Patter in Vodville Chatter on Some Flirts

By Nat H. Dorfman.

PITTER—It's getting harder to stay out of jail these days than ever before.

Patter—How do you make that out?

Pitter—Haven't you read in the papers of the number of fellows arrested for flirting?

Patter—Well, flirts deserve arresting the attention of women. Gives them credit.

Pitter—Yes, but you can't get any credit from a stern judge for that.

Patter—Oh, I don't know. I've heard of some judges who give you as high as thirty and seven sixty days, with 2 per cent off for good behavior! You couldn't ask for better terms than that.

Pitter—And I bet most of those flirts are innocent at that.

Patter—Yes, and so is the Kaiser and a lot of chorus girls, too.

Pitter—I see you don't get my idea.

Patter—Oh, I get it all right. I'm a married man myself, and I know how it is, but did you ever know it to fail, the judge who sentenced you to the workhouse is nearly always a bachelor?

Pitter—That's just it. A married judge would know better, but, being a bachelor, that gives him the extreme pleasure of singleing you out as an example.

Patter—All the same, I think flirting is dangerous to human welfare.

Pitter—I agree heartily with you there I met my wife that way.

Patter—I suppose you could call your friendship a sort of winking acquaintance.

Pitter—Which brings me up to the point about how innocently some men flirt. Do you realize that Volstead is to blame?

Patter—Volstead? Has he gone and done something again?

Pitter—Oh, no. He's done more than his share, but it's his prohibition law that has turned us all into a nation of flirts.

Patter—What has prohibition got to do with it?

Pitter—Well, we've become so accustomed to winking for a real drink that we wink as a matter of habit. A pretty girl crosses our path—

Patter—And you drink in her beautiful form and you wink, eh? Well, thirty days in the jug will cure a man of such bad habits.

Pitter—Yes, I guess you're right. The last time I spent a night in the cooler I couldn't snatch a wink—of sleep.

Patter—All of which proves that it's not the initial wink, but the upkeep that counts after you've married the girl.

CONFESSIONS OF A GROUCH

I DON'T believe Shakespeare is the greatest writer that ever lived. Some of the love notes and diaries left by slain couples show they were no slouches either.

I don't believe everybody is trying to do me. I haven't met everybody yet.

I don't believe in signs. A fortune teller told me all the signs in the heavens pointed to my being happy and wealthy. I am married and have five daughters I've gone broke supporting.

I don't believe all chorus girls marry millionaires. I don't believe there are enough millionaires to go round.

I am partial to blondes. My wife is a brunette and any change is welcome.

I don't believe you can look a woman straight in the eye and lie. That is why mine are black and blue.

I don't believe I'll ever live to cross the ocean in an aeroplane. I don't believe I'll ever be rich enough to cross it in a rowboat.

I don't take any stock in the weather reports. I've lost too many umbrellas.

What's the idea in keeping so many cops around police stations? Nobody ever wants to break in.

The divorce courts are settling the question as to whether women's place is in the home—of this man or that man.

It's about time folks stopped cracking jokes about Brooklyn, since there's a rumor out that Cook's tours have taken it off their list.

We backed the cowgirls down at Madison Square Garden to clean up the jungle. Swinging a clothesline is a woman's party.

A football game to some women is a place where thousands of spectators throw their voices around, while twenty-two men run up and down to see which side is pulling the wickedest.

The other day I waited patiently for a friend of mine to call me on the telephone. At last the phone rang and I answered and my friend said she wanted me to go over to her house so I quickly consented. I went over but to my surprise she told me that she did not call me but that I had just asked her over and would come and get her. I then went on a walk with her and as I passed the corner where my boy friends are, I noticed that they were all laughing and joking and then I knew who had done the telephoning.

HIGHBROW ESSAYS

By Joy Sutherland.

BABIES are nineteen pounds and five ounces of squall and trouble mixed in equal proportions whose chief aim in this life appears to be that of getting their big toes in their mouths and carrying the high C of a steam calliope with a busted bellow simultaneously.

They are a great deal like owls in that they sleep all day and yell all night and can make more noise in proportion to their size than anything else in the world with the probable exception of a Broadway surface car.

Kissing babies is the favorite form of exercise of maiden aunts before the infants are large enough to defend themselves, which makes them want to crawl under the kitchen table and bite the cat.

But when night comes and he is tucked away in his little bed you drift off into a deep dreamless sleep only to be suddenly awakened by a howl that would make an Apache Indian of the days of '49 back up into his tepee and dig out both eardrums with an ice pick from sheer envy.

Out you go and offer Terwilliger, Jr., everything from his grandmother's picture to the front door without any more success than "Pussyfoot Johnson" would have at a firemen's picnic. Tenderly you lift him up, start the mighty parade, step on a tack and join in the chorus. Then, about 4 a. m., "all is quiet along the Potomac" and you wonder what all the "wheelin' was about."

Medbury Says Petting Is Dangerous Unless You Know Pettee

By John P. Medbury

THE club women of Michigan have come out with the statement that petting is dangerous, and it certainly is unless you know whom you are petting.

OF course it's all right for married people to pet, providing they're married to each other.

BUT when most married couples pet each other they usually have their fists closed.

SHE caressed him with her knuckles.

THIS fellow's wife was an artist and he was proud of his black eye because it was hand painted.

THESE club women also claimed that there was a lot of extravagance in Washington. What do they want President Harding to do, buy cheaper golf balls?

THEY say, too, that what we need in the feminine set at Washington, but they're wrong we've got too many old women there now.

DURING their convention in Michigan they also agreed to start a nation-wide campaign against kissing. The only way they ever can stop kissing is to have everybody get married.

AND then they'd only stop kissing each other.

THEY claim that instead of people kissing each other they ought to do like the savages and just rub noses.

THIS is all right for the savages but maybe that's what makes them wild.

A SAVAGE husband is afraid to get too near his wife for fear they'd kill each other.

AGAIN these club women cite the old adage that kissing spreads disease. Maybe it does but Rudolph Valentino isn't in the hospital.

OF course it's a well known fact that any man or woman who indulges in much kissing never lives to be over eighty-five or ninety years old.

BUT when they reach this age they don't mind dying because they're too old to do much more kissing, anyway.

THIS club women also claim that the salaries of the movie actors and actresses are too large. The only one who agrees with the women are the guys who have to pay them.

THESE club women know what they want, and if they don't know they hold a meeting to find out.

ARE YOU A BORROWER OF TROUBLE?

Don't be looking on the future as a time of trouble.

Have confidence that the future, by reason of your efforts, will be better and brighter than the past has ever been.

Too many worry about things which never happen.

There is enough cause to worry about the actual things which come to pass without worrying about the things which might happen.

Why make yourself so much discomfort over something which may never materialize?

The troubles which may befall you in future may be the very thing needed to bring you to a state of greater usefulness to yourself and the world concerned.

Possibly you have been sliding along too easily, all through life.

Probably you have never been obliged to "get down to cases" and make yourself over after getting into a position where to extricate yourself meant success or failure.

Hard luck has "made" many men and it may make you amount to something.

So why dread the future as a time of trouble?

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super Motion Pictures Which Are Now Showing at the Park Theatre

By Charles Major

King Henry orders Brandon from the palace and then reconsiders

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

STILL the same stubborn silence was maintained. This soon began to awaken the king, and of late he had been trying to be on friendly terms again with his sister through a series of elephantine antics and bear-like pleasantries, which with the most of them, if there was in the way of bringing about a reconciliation. They were certainly useful from a moral point of view. So Henry was really glad for something to at last loosen the tongue usually so ready for an opportunity to exalt himself before those whom he was anxious to impress with his own importance, and for whom he expected to receive no less a price than the help of Louis of France, "the most powerful king of Europe" to the Imperial crown.

Thus our meetings were broken up, and Brandon knew his day in was over, and that any effort to see the princess would probably result in disaster for them both. So he left reluctantly.

The king upon that same day told Mary of the intercepted letter sent by her to Brandon at Newgate, and seemed by the way he was pleased to term an improper feeling for a low born fellow.

Mary at once sent a full account of the communication in a letter to Brandon, who read it with no small degree of ill comfort as the harbinger of trouble.

"I had better leave here soon, or I may go without my head," he remarked. "When that thought came to working in the king's brain he will strike, and I shall fall.

Letters began to come from our rooms from Mary, at first begging Brandon to come to her, and then upbraiding him because of her coldness and cowardice, and telling him that if he cared for her as he should for him he would see her, though he had to wade through fire and blood. That was exactly where the trouble lay; it was not fire and blood through which he was to have to pass—they were such matters, mere nothings that would really have added zest and better to the achievement. But the frowning brow of the tyrant, who could lend him hand and foot, and a vivid remembrance of the Newgate dungeon, with a dangling rope or a hollowed out block in the near background, were matters that would have taken the adventurous tendency out of even the cracked brain of chivalry itself. Brandon cared only to fight where there was a possible victory or ransom, or a prospect of some sort at least, of his having success. He had preferred a stone wall, and thought to smash his brains by beating them out against it, and in a sense he could do it. * * * What a pity this senseless, stiff kneed, light headed chivalry did not beat its brains out several centuries before Bayard put such an absurd price upon himself!

So every phase of the question which his good sense presented to Brandon, whose passion was as ardent though not so impatient as Mary's, that it would be worse than foolhardy to try to see her. He, however, had determined to see her once more before he left, but as it could, in all probability, be only once, he was reserving the meeting until the last and had written Mary that it was their best and only chance.

This brought to Mary a stinging realization of the fact that Brandon was about to leave her and that she would lose him if something were not done quickly. Now for Mary, after a life of gratified whims, to lose the very thing she wanted most of all—that for which she would willingly have given up every other desire her heart had ever coined—was a thought hardly to be endured. She felt that the world would surely collapse. It could not, would not, should not be.

Her vigorous young nerves were too strong to be benumbed by an overwhelming agony, as is sometimes the case with those who are fortunate enough to be weaker, so she had to suffer and endure. Life itself, yea, life a thousand times, was slipping away from her. She must be doing something or she would perish. Poor Mary! How a grand soul like hers, full of faults and weakness, can suffer! What an infinite disproportion between her susceptibility to pain and her power to combat it! She had the maximum capacity for one and the minimum strength for the other. No wonder it drove her almost mad—that excruciating pang of love.

She could not endure inaction, so she did the worst thing possible. She went alone, one afternoon, just before dusk, to see Brandon at our rooms. I was not there when she first went in, but, having seen her on the way, suspected something and followed, arriving two or three minutes after her. I knew it was best that I should be present, and was sure Brandon would wish it. When I entered they were holding each other's hands, in silence. They had not yet found their tongues, so full and crowded were their hearts. It was pathetic to see them, especially the girl, who had not Brandon's hopelessness to deaden the pain by partial resignation.

Upon my entrance, she dropped his hands and turned quickly to ward me with a frightened look, but was reassured upon seeing who it was. Brandon mechanically walked away from her and seated himself on a stool. Mary, as mechanically, moved to his side and placed her hand on his shoulder. Turning her face toward me, she said: "Sir Edwin, I know you will forgive me when I tell you that we have a great deal to say and wish to be alone."

I was about to go when Brandon stopped me.

"No, no; Caskoden, please stay. It would not do. It would be bad enough, God knows, if the princess should be found here with both of us; but, with me alone, I should be dead before morning. There is danger enough as it is, for they will watch us."

Mary knew he was right, but she could not resist a vicious little glance toward me, who was in no way to blame.

Presently we all moved into the window-way, where Brandon and Mary sat upon the great cloak and I on a camp-stool in front of them, completely filling up the little

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

"DON'T let him touch me," she cried. "He is a friend of that man."

"There, there," said Pat quietly. "I won't touch you, child. You just be still and one of these nice boys will carry you upstairs. I won't touch you. See, I'm going."

"Not you, Pat," whimpered Rosa. "With you and the beautiful Virginia I am happy and quiet. With you I am safe. But what happens, I can forget how I have to jump from the car—and from him—and how I fall on the stones and bruise my forehead so that it bled and bled and is now beginning to be quiet again."

She shuddered and collapsed as if the strain of talking had been too much for her. Little shivers shook her. I found myself standing aloof from the sympathizing circle in a mood of skepticism which made me almost ashamed of myself. I couldn't keep my eyes from focussing with almost microscopic intensities on that red stain on Rosa's forehead.

I was positive that the stain had not been straggling redly across her temples when she opened the side door of Dreamwold for me.

Looking up with a wan little smile, Rosa caught my eye. It seemed to me that her lips tightened.

"I don't need a doctor," said she wistfully and as if apologizing for—the disturbance she'd caused. "I am so—sorry"——

"Better let me get the doctor," said Pat in a voice of deep concern.

"You! You! How dare you speak about me? It was you who introduced me to this—to this woman who frighten me so that I jump from his car. It is your friend who —who!——

Rosa gasped it out so that I was almost convinced she had been compelled to jump from Lennie Stone's car and run for safety. But something sank in the back of my mind focussed on the astonishingly sweet placidity of her manner in her first moment of greeting to me. She had been calm, perfectly groomed. There was no dust upon her clothes as there might have been from a long walk. Her hat was not awry. And her forehead—I am positive—was not bruised or cut.

Pat's fairly reeled back from her attack. A smile of protest froze on his face. Gasping and shuddering, shaken, as if by hysteria and horror she could not control, Rosa pointed her finger at him and cried out her accusations that it was—he, he who had introduced to the so bad man."

"Please, Mrs. Cordova," I found myself forced to object. "Won't you let Mr. Dalton carry you upstairs." Then Mrs. Dalton and I will do all in our power to make you comfortable. If you don't want a doctor we won't get one. But I don't think you understand how upset you are. I'm so sorry you wouldn't let me try to help you when first you got home."

Rosa sank back as if too weak to reply. Virginia looked slowly from Rosa to me—visibly stiffening as an idea took root in her mind.

"You knew that Mrs. Cordova was home, Anne?" she asked smoothly.

"I tell her that I don't want to bother any one"— Rosa protested sweetly—so sweetly that it wrung full partnership Virginia.

"And you've been alone all this while' I'm so sorry. I hate to think of you suffering and afraid —while we were making merry. Now, Pat, will you please carry our little guest upstairs? And, while Mr. Parkinson goes for the doctor, Anne can act as hostess to Mr. Lacy."

"Not Mr. Parkinson—not the friend of the man who did this! I cannot take anything from such men. If you and Pat will take care of me, Jennie we will leave the—White Lilac to entertain her friends."

To Jeanie and Pat it must have sounded pathetic—pitiful even. To me it was only malicious. I hated Rosa's audacious use of given names. Yet nothing I could say would have any effect except to make it worse. Rosa had builded well. Her scene was perfect and convincing to every one but the culprits, Park and me.

Advice to the Loyelorn

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged and have made all arrangements for our marriage in a few months. But since our engagement some of the girls' friends," particularly elderly people, and even her mother, have told her that she shouldn't marry me because I am lame. That if we had children they would be deformed.

My left leg is paralyzed from infantile paralysis.

The girl is nearly twenty-two years of age and these remonstrances have made her cling all the closer to me.

Instead of her mother making the days of preparation and anticipation happy for the girl, she is keeping her steadily worried because she loves her mother and has always tried to please her.

A CRIPPLE.

SCIENCE has established firmly the fact that acquired characteristics cannot be transmitted. Indeed, many are going as far as to place little faith in heredity as compared with environment. Most of the laws of evil inheritance exist chiefly in our own minds. By suggesting to ourselves that certain bad characteristics must be carried on from generation to generation we fairly hypnotize ourselves and circumstances.

Of course—as doctors have already told you and will continue to assure you—your children have a taint of the blood, no weakness to inherit.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The prompt relief is almost magical. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

From your grocer get 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a quicker, positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese Treat Their Women

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandan, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by

LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, interviews

COUNT SAITO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Muratas, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMIMURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan. A part of the revelation is the Chonkina, or Geisha dance, seen by Barrington, who is shocked by the performance. He is disturbed to learn from the talk of Americans and Englishmen that marriages with Japanese women are not favorably regarded.

TANAKA, a nondescript Japanese, attaches himself to Barrington and accompanies him to Tokyo, where Geoffrey meets

REGGIE FORSYTH, attache to the British embassy, musical and romantic, who has just been transferred from Paris.

YAE SMITH, daughter of a Japanese mother and an English father, languishes around Reggie's apartment, where Barrington meets her.

SA ITO, lawyer for the Fujinam estate, arranges for the Barringtons to meet the bride's family. Barrington is not impressed.

"Geoffrey, darling! will you give me something?" asked Asako

THE request dismayed Geoffrey. He knew well enough what was to be seen at the Yoshiwara. He would have been interested to visit the licensed quarter of the demi-monde himself in the company of—say Reggie Forsyth. But This was a branch of inquiry which to his mind should be reserved for men alone. Nice women never think of such things. That his own wife should wish to see the place and, worse still, should express that wish in public was a blatant offence against Good Form, which could only be excused by her innocent ignorance.

But Reggie, who was used to the curiosity of every tourist, male and female, about the nightlife of Tokyo, answered readily:

Worth Seeing

"Yes, Mrs. Barrington. It's well worth seeing. We must arrange to go down there."

"Miss Smith tells me," said Asako, "that all these lovely say creatures are Yoshiwara girls; and that you can see them there now."

"Not that identical lady of course," said Reggie, who had joined the group by the fireside, "she died a hundred years ago, but her professional great-granddaughters are still there."

"And I can see them?" Asako clapped her hands. "Ladies are allowed to go and look? It does not matter? It is not improper?"

"Oh, no," said Yae Smith, "my brothers have told me. Would you like to go?"

"Yes, I would," said Asako, glancing at her husband, who, however, showed no signs of approval.

GEOFFREY'S conscience was disturbed. His face was lined and worried with thoughts such as had left him untroubled since the effervescences of his early youth. Like many young men of his caste, he had soon submitted all the baffling riddles of conduct to the thumb rule of Good Form. This Yoshiwara question was to him something more than a moral conundrum. It was a subtle attack by the wife of his bosom, aided and abetted by his old friend Reggie Forsyth and by the mysterious forces of this unfamiliar land as typified by Yae Smith, against the citadel of Good Form, against the stronghold of his principles.

Geoffrey himself wished to see the Yoshiwara. His project had been that one evening, when Asako had been invited to dinner by friends, he and Reggie would go and look at the place. This much was sanctioned by Good Form.

Locally Binding

For him to take his wife there, and for people to know that he had done so, would be the worst of Bad Form, the conduct of a rank outsider. Unfortunately, it was also Bad Form for him to discuss the matter with Asako. A terrible dilemma.

Was it possible that the laws of Good and Bad Form were only locally binding, and that here in Japan they were no longer valid?

Reggie was different. He was so awfully clever. He could extemporise on Good Form as he could extemporise on the piano. Besides, he was a victim to the artistic temperament, which cannot control itself. But Reggie had not been improved by his sojourn in this queer country, or he would never have so far forgotten himself as to speak in such a way in the presence of ladies.

Geoffrey would give him a good beating at tennis; and then, having him to a fit state of humility, he would have it out with him. For Barrington was not a man to nurse displeasure against his friends.

The tennis courts at Tokyo—which stand in a magnificent central position one day to be occupied by the Japanese Houses of Parliament—are every afternoon the meeting place for youth in exile with a sprinkling of Japanese, some of whom have acquired great skill at the game. Towards tea-time the ladies arrive to watch the evening efforts of their husbands and admirers, and to escort them home when the light begins to fail. So the tennis courts have become a little social oasis in the vast desert of oriental life. Brilliant it is not. Sparkle there is none. But there is a certain fairiness, the forced gaiety of caged birds.

The day was warm and bright. The snow had vanished as though by supernatural command. Geoffrey enjoyed his game thoroughly, although he was beaten, being out of practice and unused to gravel courts. But the exercise made him, in his own language, "sweat like a pig," and he felt better. He thought he would shelve the unpleasant subject for the time being; but it was Reggie himself who revived it.

Special Show

"About the Yoshiwara," he said, seating himself on one of the benches placed around the courts. "They are having a special show down there tomorrow. It will probably be worth seeing."

"Look here," said Geoffrey, "is it the thing for ladies—English ladies—to go to a place like that?"

"Of course," answered his friend, "it is one of the sights of Tokyo. Why, I went with Lady Cynthia not so long ago. She was quite fascinated."

"By Jove!" Geoffrey ejaculated. "But for a young girl——? Did Miss Cotton go, too?"

"Not on that occasion; but I have no doubt she has been."

"But don't it much the same thing as taking a lady to a public brothel?"

"Not in the least," was Reggie's answer, "it is like along Piccadilly after nightfall, looking in at the Empire, and returning via Regent Street; and in Paris, like a visit to the Rat Mort and the Bal Tabarin. It is the local version of an old theme."

"But is that a nice sight for a lady?"

"It is what every lady wants to see."

"Reggie, what rot! Any clean-minded girl——"

"Geoffrey, old man, would you like to see the place?"

"Yes, but for a man it's different."

"Why do you want to see it? You're not going there for business, I presume?"

"Why? See curiosity, I suppose. One hears such a lot of people talk about the Yoshiwara——"

"For curiosity, that's right; and do you really think that women, even clean-minded women, have less curiosity than men?"

Geoffrey Barrington started to laugh at his own discomfiture.

"Reggie, you were always a devil for arguing," he said. "At heaven one would never talk about things like that."

"There must be a slight difference then between Home and Abroad. Certain bonds are relaxed. Abroad, one is a sight-seer. One is out to watch the appearance and habits of the natives in a semi-scientific mood, just as one looks at animals in the Zoo. Besides, nobody knows or cares who one is. One has no awkward responsibilities towards one's neighbors, and there is little or no danger of finding an intimate acquaintance in an embarrassing position. In London one lives in constant dread of finding people out."

"But my wife," Geoffrey continued, troubled once more, "I can't imagine——"

"Mrs. Barrington may be an exception; but take my word for it, every woman, however good and holy, is intensely interested in the lives of her fallen sisters. They know less about them than we do. They are therefore mysterious and interesting to them. And yet they are much nearer to them by the whole difference of sex. There is always a personal query arising, 'I, too, might have chosen that life—what would it have brought me?'

On Tennis Courts

"There is a certain compassion, too, and above all there is the intense interest of rivalry. Who is not interested in his arch-enemy? And what woman does not want to know by what unholy magic her unfair competitor holds her power over men?"

The tennis courts were filling with youths released from offices. In the court facing them two young fellows had begun a single. One of them was a Japanese; the other, though his hair and eyes were of the native breed, was too fair of skin and too tall of stature. He was a Eurasian. They both played exceedingly well. The rallies were long sustained, the drives beautifully timed and taken. The few unemployed about the courts soon made this game the object of their special attention.

"Who are they?" asked Geoffrey, glad to change the conversation.

"That's Aubrey Smith. Yae's brother, one of the best players here, and Viscount Kamimura, who ought to be quite the best; but he has just married, and his wife will not let him play often enough."

"Oh," exclaimed Geoffrey, "he was on the ship with us coming out."

He had not recognised the good-looking young Japanese. He had not expected to meet him somehow in such a European milieu. Kamimura had noticed his fellow-traveler, however, and when the set was over and the players had changed sides, he came up and rested him most cordially.

"I hear you are already married," said Geoffrey. "Our best congratulations!"

"Thank you," replied Kamimura, flushing. Japanese blush readily as to their complexion.

"We Japanese must not boast about our wives. It is what you all Bad Form. But I would like to meet Mrs. Barrington. She spoke English not so badly."

"Yes," said Geoffrey, "I hope you will come and dine with us one evening at the Imperial."

"Thank you very much," answered the young Viscount. "How long are you staying in Japan?"

"Oh, for some months."

"Then we shall meet often, I hope," he said, and returned to his game.

Decent Fellow

"A very decent fellow; quite human," Reggie commented.

"Yes, isn't he?" said Geoffrey; and then he asked suddenly,—

"Do you think he would take his wife to see the Yoshiwara?"

"Probably not; but then they are Japanese people living in Japan. That alters everything."

"I don't think so," said Geoffrey; and he was conscious of having scored off his friend for once.

Miss Yae Smith had arrived on her daily visit to the courts. She was already surrounded by a little retinue of young men, who, however, scattered at Reggie's approach.

Miss Yae smiled graciously on the two new-comers and inquired after Mrs. Barrington.

"It was so nice to talk with her the other day; it was like being in England again."

Yes, Miss Yae had been in England and in America too. She preferred those countries very much to Japan. It was so much more amusing. There was so little to do here. Besides, in Japan it was such a small world; and everybody was so disagreeable, especially the women, always saying untrue, unkind things.

Looked Sprite

She looked so immaterial and sprite-like in her blue kimono, her strange eyes downcast as her habit was when talking about herself and her own doings, that Geoffrey could think no evil of her, nor could he wonder at Reggie's gaze of intense admiration which beat upon her like sunlight on a picture.

However, Asako must be waiting for him. He took his leave, and returned to his hotel.

Asako had been entertaining a visitor. She had gone out shopping for an hour, not altogether pleased to find herself alone. On her return, a Japanese gentleman in a vivid green suit had arisen from a seat in the lounge of the hotel, and had introduced himself.

"I am Ito, your attorney-at-law."

He was a small, podgy person with a round, oily face and heavy voluted moustaches. The expression of his eyes was hidden behind gold rimmed spectacles. It would have been impossible for a European to guess his age, anything between twenty-five and fifty. His thick, plum-colored hair was brushed up on his forehead in a butcher-boy's curl. His teeth glittered with dentist's gold. He wore a tweed suit of bright pea-soup color, a rainbow tie and yellow boots. The bulge of an egg-shaped stomach hung a massive gold watch-chain, blossoming into a semi-heraldic charm, which might have been a Masonic emblem or a cycling club badge. His breast-pocket appeared to hold a quiverful of fountain pens.

"How do you do, Mrs. Barrington? I am pleased to meet you."

Father's Friend

The voice was high and squeaky, like a boy's voice when it is breaking. The outstretched hand was soft and greasy, in spite of its attempt at a firm grip. With elaborate politeness he ushered Mrs. Barrington into her chair. He took his place close beside her, crossed his fat legs, and stuck his thumbs into his armholes.

"I am your friend Ito," he began, "your father's friend, and I am sure to be your friend, too."

But for the reference to her father she would have snubbed him. She decided to give him tea in the lounge, and not invite him to her private rooms. A growing distrust of her countrymen, arising largely from observation of the ways of Tanaka, was making little Asako less confiding than of yore. She was still ready to be amused by them, but she was becoming less credulous of the Japanese pose of simplicity and the conventional smile. However, she was soon mated by Mr. Ito's kindliness of manner. He patted her hand, and called her "little girl."

"I am your old lawyer," he kept on saying, "your father's friend, and your best friend too. Anything you want, just ring me and you have it. There's my number. Don't forget me. Shiba 1324. What do you think of Japan, now? Beautiful country, I think. And you have not yet seen Miyanoshita, or Kamakura, or Nikko temples. You have not yet got automobile, I think. Indeed, I am sorry for you. That is a very wrong thing! I shall at once order for you a splendid automobile, and we must make a grand trip. Every rich and noble person possesses splendid automobile."

"Oh, that would be nice!" Asako clapped her hands. "Japan is so pretty. I do want to see more of it. But I must ask my husband about buying the motor."

Ito laughed a fat, oily laugh. "Indeed, that is Japanese style, little girl. Japanese wife say, 'I ask my husband.' American style wife very different. She say, 'My husband do this, do that'—like coolie. I have traveled much abroad. I know American custom very well."

All She Wanted

"My husband gives me all I want, and a great deal more," said Asako.

"He is very kind man," grinned the lawyer, "because the money is all yours—not his at all. Ha, ha!"

Then, seeing that his officiousness was overstepping the mark, he added quickly:

"I know American ladies very well. They don't give money to their husbands. They tell their husbands, 'You give money to me.' They just do everything themselves, writing cheques all the time!"

"Really?" said Asako; "but my husband is the kindest and best man in the world!"

"Quite right, quite right. Love your husband like a good little girl. But don't forget your old lawyer, Ito. I was your father's friend. We were at school together here in Tokyo."

This interested Asako immensely. She tried to make the lawyer talk further, but he said that it was a very long story, and he must tell her some other time. Then she asked him about her cousin, Mr. Fujinami Genjuro.

"He is away from town just now. When he returns, I think he will invite you to splendid feast."

With that he took his leave.

Help That Aching Back!

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

ACHE, ache, ache—all day long that nagging backache! You get up in the morning lame, stiff—achy all over. And so you spend the day—worn-out and miserable. Evening comes and finds you barely able to drag yourself to bed. Tomorrow the same weary round of suffering. But why continue in this unhappy condition? Why not look to your kidneys, which are so likely at fault? That dull, unceasing backache, is often Nature's first signal of hidden kidney weakness. Other warnings quickly follow, such as distressing kidney action, headaches, dizziness, and knife-like pains when you stoop or lift. Don't wait for serious trouble. Use Doan's Kidney Pills before it is too late. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

Read How These Boston Folks Found Relief:

ARTHUR SMITH, barber, 255 Emerson St., South Boston, says: "My kidneys troubled me and my back often ached so I couldn't bend. At times I had sharp catches through my kidneys that almost doubled me up. The kidney action was irregular, too, but Doan's Kidney Pills soon strengthened me. The backaches left and my kidneys acted normally."

The above statement was given February 5, 1919, and on September 24, 1920, Mr. Smith said: "Since my first attack of kidney trouble and the cure Doan's Kidney Pills gave me at that time, I have not been troubled."

MRS. W. H. McLEOD, 77 Falcon St., East Boston, says: "I suffered with backache and kidney trouble, caused by over-work. Mornings I could hardly get out of bed and when I stooped, a sharp pain took me in the small of my back and I could hardly move. My kidneys acted too often and my feet bloated so badly my shoes felt tight. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and bought a box at Richards & Case's Drug Store. They soon helped me. Four boxes of Doan's dispelled the backaches and other ailments."

C. E. LEE, moulder, 34 Dakota Road, Dorchester, says: "I strained my back doing heavy work and as a result I suffered from kidney trouble. I couldn't stoop on account of the misery in the small of my back. The kidney secretions passed too often and they were highly colored and burned in passage. As my wife had received good results from Doan's Kidney Pills, I bought a box. I soon felt better, and after using four boxes of Doan's I was cured."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Should foreign debts be cancelled?

No.

Are foreign nations in a position to pay these debts on the terms laid down by the law recently passed by Congress?

No.

What then?

* * *

Few of us like a one-man show. Whenever I allow myself to be roped into making a talk, I always urge that I should talk only half the allotted time and allow any one and everyone to fire questions at me.

This procedure was followed when I addressed the largest advertising club in the world, in Chicago, and I have just received a copy of Chicago Commerce, a weekly published by the Chicago Association of Commerce, which gives verbatim my reply to a question I was asked in almost every city where I spoke. Indeed, this same question was asked so frequently that it became very clear that there was widespread and keen interest in the subject.

* * *

This being so, it may not be out of place to reprint the following from the official publication of Chicago's Association of Commerce.

The following question was asked by Dwight Connor:

"Mr. Forbes has been discussing things at home, which has been very interesting. I would like to jump across the ocean and ask him a question. Much has been said, there is much still to be said, concerning the moneys that various countries abroad owe this country. Shall we cancel those debts, Mr. Forbes?"

To this Mr. Forbes replied:

"I think America could very properly say to those debtors: 'You owe us money. You are not paying us back. You owe it to your own honor to do everything you can to pay us back. Instead of doing everything you can to pay us back, you are going ahead and acting like a lot of sailors. You are spending millions and millions on standing armies; your governments are running riot in their expenditures; you are not imposing sufficient taxation to make your budgets balance; you are not doing your best to get into a position to pay us what you owe us. We want you to do your utmost to get into a position to pay us.

* * *

"If you go about correcting these evils, getting down to brass tacks, disbanding your standing armies, dropping all your petty jealousies, and doing everything to get your house in order, then have one done that, you will find us reasonable in discussing with you some feasible, practical compromise for liquidating as much as possible of what you owe us.

"The long and the short of what you choose to go on as you have been doing, pumping out paper currency by the billion, and doing other economic things, not a single dollar is going to be cancelled."

* * *

I would not be astonished if, by and by, it were deemed necessary by Congress to send American experts to check very carefully the status of our debtors and then draw up settlement terms suitable and feasible for each country.

Boston Notes

AUGUSTUS J. BOYDEN, recently member of the firm of Bond & Goodwin, has become associated with Townsend, Anthony & Tyson.

COPPER RANGE mines report a gain in man-power. New openings have revealed good ground in Trimountain and Champion.

CALUMET & HECLA mine developments are considered very promising.

MINERS who returned to Copper Range and Mohawk, after having work in West Virginia coal fields, declared conditions in red metal mines were by far the most desirable.

MAYFLOWER workers have as their objective a rich deposit struck several years ago by diamond drilling.

UNITED DRUG'S candy factory at St. Louis, part of the big manufacturing plant constructed there in 1922, is running twenty-four hours a day three shifts of eight hours.

ADJOURNED meeting of Edison Electric Illuminating Company shareholders to act on proposition on issuance of 54,067 additional shares of stock has again been adjourned, to 12 noon, November 24.

BOSTON & MAINE is now pretty well assured of earning its fixed charges this year, a result not witnessed for nearly five years, disregarding government compensation of Federal control period.

VENTURA OIL'S financial condition is declared by backers never to have been better than at this time.

GENERAL ELECTRIC, with a "normal" payroll of 100,000, is carrying around 86,000 workers at this time.

BIG CALUMET'S October shipments from Michigan district are declared to have been larger than total shipped by all of the mines in any preceding month.

UTAH Copper's Arthur mill is treating more than 15,000 tons daily.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—We would continue policy of selling stocks on any substantial rally and again we are forced to repeat that two or three-point rallies in the average stock with proportionately larger rallies in big stocks are all that can be expected this year.

New York Market Is Generally Strong; U. S. Steel Gains Around 2 Points

NEW HAVEN OFF WITH SEVERE SETBACK

Stocks were generally strong on the New York Stock Exchange, with money ruling at 5 per cent. New Haven, on strength of its poor earnings statement, was an outstanding reactionary feature, dropping more than 3 before it started recovery.

U. S. Steel common gained 2 points and the gains began to be general in the last hour.

National Biscuit rose over 15, Standard Oil of New Jersey and National Lead over 6, Delaware & Lackawana around 5 and American Car & Foundry 4.

Three-point gains showed in American Tobacco, Baldwin, Corn Products, General Electric, Houston, May Stores, Mex Pete, Studebaker and United Fruit.

The morning hurried covering of shorts, impelled by indications that overselling had been carried too far in various issues, and signs that current prices were attracting the attention of bargain hunters caused active bidding for stocks with resultant advances of 1 to 4 points in many instances.

Hardity of the advance in stocks caused some realizing which lowered Union Pacific, Gulf States Steel, Chicago Northwestern and Utah Copper 2 points from their best prices.

Mid-day weakness also was shown by Brown Shoe, General American Tank, Delaware & Hudson, Crucible Steel, Canadian Pacific, Royal Dutch, Virginia Carolina Chemical, Shattuck-Arizona and Jones Bros. Tea, which fell 1 to 2¼ points under Tuesday's final figures.

French 7½s Make Advance of 3 Points

Business was on a large scale in the bond market. There was a period of hesitation at the outset in which small losses were scored by some of the foreign public utility, speculative railroads and industrial issues, with Liberty bonds also receding from 10 to 32 points.

The entire market moved vigorously upward later under stimulus of an active demand for principal foreign liens.

French 7½s moved up 3 points, Tokio 5s, French 8s and Paris-Lyons Mediterranean 6s, 2 to 2½; and Rosario 6s, Kyona 7s, Saxgren 6s, Dutch East Indies 6s of 1962 and United Kingdom 6½s of 1937, 1 to 1¾.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—November 15, 1922

Total amount borrowed by the city of Boston, 1921-22, was $5,469,500, or $2,624,520 more than 1920-21.

Dorothy Gordon

Dorothy Gordon, who was committed to McLean Insane Asylum at Waverley in January, 1917, was discharged from there as cured on December 2, 1918, after having been permitted to leave there at times.

March 22, 1921, the girl, just turned twenty-one years, was again taken to McLean asylum by her guardian, William F. Jardine. She is heiress to an estate estimated at $400,000.

The principal of the girls' boarding school which Dorothy had just left, Miss Gertrude Cornish, says:

"If we are called to testify as to Dorothy's sanity, any number of us would be willing to testify that she was perfectly sane when she entered and when she left this school."

This 1921 commitment was apparently a voluntary one. Ostensibly the girl entered the asylum of her own volition.

Jardine, the guardian, testified at the hearing before Master Pevey Thursday:

Q.—Was Dorothy crazy when she left the house with you that morning of March 22, 1921?
A.—From my own knowledge I would not say she was.
Q.—Will you say she was insane when she was put in the asylum?
A.—She was insane after she got there.
Q.—Didn't you call a specialist to examine her before you took her?
A.—No.
Q.—You had no knowledge that she was insane?
A.—No positive knowledge.

Dr. Frederick H. Packard, superintendent at McLean asylum, has admitted and, in fact, produced asylum records to show that Miss Gordon has been kept many, many n'ghts in a strait-jacket of "camisole" type. This device, fitting the girl's body securely and binding her hands and arms in its sleeves, was left on nights until 8:30 a. m.

Sometimes this restraint was imposed in the day time. Nearly every night the girl was "camisoled." In April, May, June, July and August of this year she was thus bound nightly. It has not been necessary, however, to restrain her thus since September 24.

Jardine knew of this "camisoling" because he saw some of it. He said in testimony Monday:

Q.—Did Dorothy tell you she was restrained?
A.—I saw her in bed.
Q.—How was she restrained?
A.—She was strapped in a tight sheet and camisole.

Jardine testified that he was satisfied that this restraint was for the girl's own good. He believed that otherwise she would have done herself bodily harm.

But he also said in testimony:

Q.—For what reason did they put a camisole on her at night?
A.—The nurse had to wait on another patient in the next room.
Q.—Why did you leave her there to be kept in restraint if she was not getting the services of a nurse?
A.—It was better than keeping her at home and keeping four or five nurses.
Q.—It was HER money, wasn't it?
A.—Yes.

But Jardine stated last Friday that, the first time Dorothy was taken to the asylum, he gave orders she was "to receive the best care money could buy."

He was not paying $75 a week then, but was later. To quote the terse language of Attorney Sheehan, who is conducting the legal battle for a change of guardianship, the asylum has "raised the ante."

It is interesting, in connection with the financial end of this case, that Jardine has admitted on the witness stand that he pays $65 a month house rent, but collects $50 a month from Dorothy's estate for her room in the house—which the girl does not use. Jardine admitted that Dorothy has never been inside the room in the Winchester house for which $50 a month is charged against her estate.

As to the need of strait-jackets or "camisoles" or other forms of restraint in insane asylums.

McLean is a private institution. Dr. John A. Houston, superintendent of Northampton State Hospital, says:

"We do not use restraints here. Not a single patient has been placed under restraint in Northampton State Hospital since 1890. At that time it was generally believed by those who were in charge of treatment of the insane that what we call 'disturbed cases', commonly called violent, had to be restrained through the use of the strait-jacket, or by tying the hands and feet, or both.

"I promptly discarded that method, having been led to believe from my years of experience in mental treatment that it was unnecessary. My theory proved correct and at no time since have we restrained a patient."

Consider, too, the words of Dr. George M. Kline. He is Commissioner of the State Department of Mental Diseases. He said, Saturday:

"If a sufficient number of nurses had been placed with Miss Gordon, she would have had the scientific care that is supposed to be given the mentally ill in these enlightened times.

"MANY OF THESE PRIVATE INSTITUTIONS FORMERLY USED RESTRAINT TO TAKE THE PLACE OF NURSES BECAUSE RESTRAINT WAS CHEAPER THAN EMPLOYING A NURSE TO PROTECT AND CARE FOR THE PATIENT IN A HUMANE WAY.

"Private institutions can increase their incomes and make a great deal of money out of a patient who pays $75 a week and up, if they use one nurse for four or five patients at night. But this is possible ONLY WHEN THE NURSE OR SUPERINTENDENT RESORTS TO THE NOW OBSOLETE METHOD OF TYING UP THE PATIENT.

"No matter how sane a patient is when she enters an institution it won't take a prolonged period in solitary confinement and under restraint, especially if she is bound hand and foot, for her to become insane."

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS GIRL'S CASE? SHOULD ANY STONE BE LEFT UNTURNED BY STATE AUTHORITIES TO AID EVERY DETAIL OF THIS GIRL'S CONDITION AND TO FIND OUT WHETHER THE LAST LETTER OF THE LAW HAS BEEN LIVED UP TO IN DEPRIVING MISS GORDON OF HER LIBERTY?

Coming of Clemenceau

We most sincerely hope that no embroglio, smelling and indecent as it must be under the circumstances now threatening, will mar the coming of M. Clemenceau to the city of Boston.

He is one of the world's great public characters. He was well-known in America before the war. He is as well-known today as one of our own Presidents. He probably guided the statesmanship of the war. Certainly he sat at the head of the table. Though he is now a private citizen he cannot be divested of his public character. Those who from a misunderstanding of the situation or from destructive vanity seek to make him for their purposes a private citizen only demean his public character. We do not believe that anyone wants to do so.

The Whistling of a Name

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

WHAT is your surname? Do you know its origin and meaning?

If you don't know these things about your name, look it up. You may learn something interesting about your family's past, of which you may foolishly be ashamed—or just as foolishly be proud.

After all, what YOU are is what counts—not the name that your wise, prenatal choice of parents has given you. And yet most of us are curiously "set up" about the family name. With due respect—this is, indeed, an incentive towards that fine living which reflects credit upon an honored name and thus justifies at least a modest and creative pride.

But what would you think of that pride when it develops a proprietary quality, the monopolistic spirit, a determination to prevent others from using your name? One would suggest that such fine folks should try to have their names patented to prevent infringement. Who knows but that, since they take so much stock in themselves, they might capitalize their name and sell the right to its use, wholly or in part.

What's all this fuss about, anyhow? Well, to continue, it was stirred by the reading of the following funny news item:

At a meeting in Boston of members of the Reed, Read and Reid families, resolutions were adopted asking that a national act be passed by Congress making it unlawful for any person to assume the family surname of any one of Colonial, Revolutionary or historical fame.

Hold on, and hold your sides. That's not all.

It was also voted that for the protection of such names, and to avoid confusion, mistaken or fraud to the posterity, the organization seek to prevent foreigners from taking any Colonial or American names which have been made prominent.

And so, ye sacred slopes of Beacon Hill! What will happen to the Reeds and Reids when the Saltonstalls and Cabots realize that the Reads have stolen a march on them in discovering the proprietary possibilities of a name?

Gordon Girl Case

Editor Boston American:

Think of the heartaches, the misery and merciless abuse that Gordon girl has gone through. I know what goes on in those four walled halls all over the country, and it must be stopped by some one whose power money cannot buy. This is the reason I appeal to the powerful Hearst paper to take that Gordon girl out of the asylum, for she is sane.

Take that girl out, put her among her old school friends; give her what belonged to her, and see—let the world see—who is right. Then I'll disclose who I am. I hope the Boston American will do justice for Miss Gordon.

Mother's Viewpoint

Editor Boston American:

Just a few lines to express my feelings as well as those of my sisters in matrimony in regard to Mr. Harvey's illusions as regards women. Mr. Harvey's withdrawal from the argument is just like a man. Although we do not claim them to be entirely soulless, we do deem necessary to defend ourselves which was an existing factor long before this generation and has been improved simply through the souls of real women. I am mother of eight babies in ten years, and nothing has stood in the way of my carrying on the works and aims of those before me. Suffrage, birth control, etc., not even a world war has upset me. I must add that I belong to France, or rather to its women, who are the soul of France and have stood by in its many bloodsheds, doing the work of men, and if Mr. Harvey and his followers will look back they may possibly find traces of their own soul within that of a mother's soul.

No Color Line

Editor Boston American:

Permit me to inform Mr. Southerner that we, the public, have every cause to be interested in the affair of George Chandler. We are a Northern public, and he is one of us. Were he to go South I venture to say that he would, as a gentleman, respect the laws and customs of the South. Again, when you speak of a dividing color line just remember that it does not exist here.

THE HELPING HAND

Wheel Chair

Editor Boston American:

I am a poor woman and just had my leg amputated at the City Hospital. I hate to ask so much, but I wonder if anyone has a wheel chair. It is so hard for me to help myself, and if I had a chair I could do so much. I have no one to help me, and I will be so grateful for any help.

ED. NOTE—The wheel chair mentioned in this column a few days ago has been given away. Perhaps some other reader has one for this deserving woman.

Lonesome Boy

Editor Boston American:

I am a lonesome boy, my little brother having died. I left school four years ago to take care of him after my father died. I have tried to find work in factories, but am not strong enough. Is there some mother who understands and who would be willing to let me take care of her little sonny during the day? It might make me forget my poor brother. I am sixteen years old. C. C.

ED. NOTE—Will C. C. send in his address?

Blind Vets Led by Dogs

By Caroline V. Kerr

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—One of the most practical and at the same time psychological solutions of the problem of the "war blind," seems to have been found by the Siemens-Halske works in Berlin, probably the largest electro-technical concern in the world.

This firm has just celebrated its seventy-fifth birthday. "Siemens City," as it is called, is accepted in every way as the model workingman's settlement. It was in conformity with this policy that the employes of the firm who were called to the colors were promised that their jobs would be waiting them upon their return.

This promise has been interpreted as not only meaning the able-bodied and those who sustained only slight injuries should be put back on the payroll, but literally, "the lame, the halt and the blind," are back in the workrooms.

To the Siemens-Halske firm belongs the credit of creating an independent working sphere for a group of blind workmen. A special workroom has been set apart for them where they are engaged in the production of quantitive articles.

As the visitor enters the "blind ward," humming and throbbing with the noise of scores of electrically-driven machines, his eye is arrested by the unexpected presence of a herd of shepherd dogs, each of whom has his place under the table of the particular workman to whom he has been assigned as a guide.

These animals have received a thorough course of training and have been warned especially of the dangers of electrical machines. Their intelligence is nothing short of astounding, and their presence here bespeaks the care and thought that has been expended upon every phase of this problem.

While the "blind ward" at the Siemens-Halske works was not intended primarily as a marriage bureau, it has, nevertheless, had this effect, and a number of happy marriages have resulted from this juxtaposition of the touchingly helpless men and their sympathetic women comrades.

SEEN AND HEARD

MAYOR CURLEY'S office in City Hall is now graced with two flags, the American and the city flag. They stand on brass pedestals each side of the open fire-place. They are the two that formerly were displayed in the City Council chamber.

One may now have his shoes polished for one cent. A new electrical machine has been installed in the office of the Industrial and Commercial Bureau for this purpose.

REV. DR. GEORGE B. NICHOLSON, D.D., of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Somerville has had a colorful career. While selling gloves in a downtown department store he utilized his evenings by studying theology. He was instrumental in collecting funds for Bates College, Lewiston, Me., and for this work he was awarded a degree of D.D. by that college.

The sign on Atlantic avenue, "Everything necessary for winning the campaign," which attracted some notice before the ending of the political campaign, was changed by some wag to "Everything necessary for the whining campaign."

The sign lured so many passers-by to it that it had to be finally withdrawn.

Within the next few years Newton will embark on a school building program that will run into over two million dollars. When the program is completed five new junior high schools will be in use as well as enlarged grammar and primary buildings. The new junior high school at Newtonville is now nearly ready for occupancy.

Beverly Historical Society has indexed its rare collection of historical papers for the benefit of local students. Students in the schools above the eighth grade have been invited to make use of these valuable documents in studying local and national history. MISS KATHERINE P. LORING, president of the society, is encouraging this effort to give young people a more interesting side of local history.

Faithfulness to duty brings its reward. JOHN H. L. NOYES, newly-elected chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners, is now head of the department that he entered as an office boy years ago at a dollar and a half a week. He now receives $4,500 a year.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS LEWIS A. FALES of Attleboro says that if "a large number of pupils leaving school is alarming. He ascribes this to the rush of business in the jewelry shops with good paying jobs.

At the exercises on Boston Common in connection with the Armistice Day celebration, MAYOR CURLEY was introduced as "His Excellency." In acknowledging the title, he said, "Not quite yet, but surely in two years hence."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON OTHER HORIZONS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I was very much interested in your article on 'Horizons,' and wish you had gone a little further and stated something regarding the horizons upon such bodies as the sun, moon, etc. We had quite a discussion on this point at a small gathering, and would like to know, other things being equal with earthly conditions, what would be the human eye-sweep if one stood on the shore of a solar or lunar sea?—F. A. S., New York."

WELL, let us pay a visit to the moon as it hangs in the chill November sky. Having precautiously gotten rid of our earthly sensibility to cold we shall not mind how low the temperature sinks among the lunar mountains and plains. Besides, we may find it warmer in the unclouded sunshine there than we expected, provided that we keep out of the shadows.

We shall have to imagine the moon turning on its axis and enjoying a succession of short days and nights such as the earth now has, and, for our purposes, we can disregard the protest that such lunatic fancies have no scientific sanction and are contradicted by astronomy. They merely constitute a "working hypothesis" intended to make us comfortable during our visit to the lunar world.

We stand then on the marge of the Mare Imbrium, with the huge range of the Lunar Apennines towering close behind the shore, and we make a map-case of ship of the Lunar Carthage for companion. We look eastward across the sea and our terrestrially trained eyes are startled by the nearness of the horizon. From the sands of the beach our eye-level is about six feet. From an Atlantic beach we should see the sky meet the sea about three miles away—disregarding atmospheric refraction, which increases the distance. But from this lunar strand the horizon appears not much more than a mile and a half away.

The difference arises from the smaller diameter of the moon, whose radius is about 1,080 miles against nearly 4,000 for the earth. On the larger earth the surface drops, or rounds off, only eight inches in a mile, the amount of depression increasing with the square of the distance, so that in three miles it becomes nine times eight inches, or six feet.

But the moon rounds off about 2.44 feet in a mile, and that at a distance of only 1.56 mile, the amount of depression becomes six feet. As we stand gazing from the sands, our lunar Carthaginian friend points out a white speck reating on the blue horizon, and rubs his hands joyfully.

"One of the ships," he says, "laden with diamonds from Aristarchus, that wonderful island over in the Oceanus Procellarum." (Oceanus Procellarum means "Ocean of Tempests").

"How high is that sail above water?" we ask, brooding our mathematical fancies.

"A hundred feet."

"Let me see, let—me—see," we murmur, figuring. "Eye-height 6 feet, depression 2.44 feet to mile, therefore distance of horizon 1.56 mile. Sail's height 100 feet, therefore its distance beyond horizon 6.4 miles, which added to 1.56 gives 7.96 miles for distance of ship from shore. Why, on the earth its distance would be over 16 miles!"

There is room to remark that on the sun, the depression of the horizon would be only about one-fourteenth of an inch in a mile!

MODERN TURK NOW MONOGAMIST

By Munir Hairi Bey

Paris, Nov. 14.

THE idea that Halide Edib Hanoum, the Turkish poetess, wife of Adnen Bey, vice-president of the Angora National Assembly, is a rarity among Turkish women arises from an entire misconception of the role of Turkish women on the part of foreigners.

Malicious literature has made the Turk the hero of a hundred voluptuous legends, all exaggerated where they are not absolute fiction.

Turkey has had many great women. Princess Djem Fitnat, who lived during the reign of Louis XV, was perhaps the most celebrated. Her satirical works have been published in all languages.

In the Fourteenth Century Princess Neyioufer created universities and became famous in literary world. In the reign of Suliman the Magnificent Princess Roxalan, once a fruit seller, played a considerable role in politics.

These were not "harem women," as is generally supposed. Besides, what is a harem? Harem in Turkish means wife. My harem is my wife. My harem is also the bedroom of my wife and myself. It is not a place of orgies, even in the homes of the pashas.

The nobility of the Turkish race is strongly attached to monogamy; his wife is invariably jealous and then the Pasha is not admitted into the harem where his wife's serving women and ladies of honor live.

As custom forbids the wife to enter the Salamlek, reserved for the husband's sex only, the Pasha and his wife meet in an apartment situated between the Salamlek and the harem. This place is called the mabeine odaxze.

The Sultan himself never enters the private apartment of his wife—that is to say, his harem—without the express permission of the chief eunuch.

Furthermore, it is many years since Turkish women were condemned to remain secluded in their harems. In the reign of Ahmed III., of the same period as Louis XV., Turkish women have the same degree of personal liberty as have men.

Turkish customs are not very different from those in Occidental countries. Under the Byzantine influence polygamy was implanted among the Ottomans, but today monogamy is the rule. There are practically no Turks today with more than one wife.

Bigamists and divorced men are considered in Turkey in the same disgraceful light as are men in America who have served a sentence in jail. Stones are thrown through the windows of men known to keep a mistress.

Today Time has completed its work. The Turk and his wife walk the streets together, just as they do in Europe and in America. One sees them in the cafes, in the cinemas. Their home life is the same as yours.

The Turk of cruel legend is no more.
